CALL 29 IN MURDER INQUEST

Presence of Boston Detectives Causes Report of New Clew in Killing of the Little Schoolgirl

The inquest into the death of seven-year-old Loretta Winifred Wakelin of Melrose opened in the Malden court today before Judge E. Leroy Sweetser, with twenty-nine witnesses on hand.

These witnesses consisted of the Wakelin family and a number of their neighbors, police, doctors and others, and were as follows:

Joseph Wakelin, his wife, Mrs. Sarah Wakelin; their children, Florence, twenty-nine years; William, twenty-five years; Edward A., thirteen years, and Mrs. Lillian Wakelin Johnson, twenty-seven years; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Higgins, their seven-year-old son "Johnny," Medical Examiner Roscoe D. Perley, Chief of Police George E. Kerr of Melrose, Patrolmen William Doherty, Alston H. Pineo and Reserve Officer William T. Fahy; Dr. F. D. Randall of Malden, who officiated at the birth of Loretta Wakelin; Mrs. Mary Hosley and her daughters, Ruth and Hazel; Ruth Gaynor, Joseph R. Miller, a colored man; Frank W. Hamilton, Louis Davidson, Frank Richardson, Mrs. Belle C. Talbot, George Rand, a conductor; George Groves, Sigerd Olsen of the tug Saturn and State Officer Silas P. Smith.

DETECTIVE IN COURT.

Robert Burns of the Robert Burns Detective Agency of Boston was present in court, and it was rumored that a new clew had been discovered on which the authorities were working.

It was expected that the inquest would last into the night owing to the number of witnesses and the minuteness with which District Attorney Corcoran planned interrogating each person called.

Johnny Higgins, the eight-year-old

AMERICAN KILLS THREE MEXICANS

El Paso, Tex., June 8.—Three Mexicans lost their lives in Tuesday night's rioting in Chihuahua, Mexico, when they attempted to enter the home of an American resident there, according to an arrival here today. The situation there as regards safety of Americans was described as exceedingly grave.

ORPET'S LETTERS FERVID

Correspondence Traces Love with Marian Lambert; Trial Finally Starts with Prosecutor's Address

By International News Service.

Waukegan, Ill., June 8.—The letters of Will Orpet to Marian Lambert—the written history of the growth and decline of their tragic love—were given out today by State's Attorney Dady.

With the jury box filled the trial today opened in earnest. Attorney Cady delivered the opening address for the State and planned to call the father of Marian Lambert as his first witness.

The letters of Orpet created a sensation.

Not all the letters were made public, just enough to reveal the intimacy of the relations that existed between Orpet and the girl who paid for her love with her life. Orpet wrote in French, a language that allowed him fuller play for what he wrote.

The letters are a simple chronology of the boy's pursuit of the girl. The pursuit began early last summer. On May 5, Orpet wrote: "I am awfully disappointed in you, Marian. However, I have not given up hopes. I am going to try and bring you around to it after awhile."

That was the beginning. Orpet was in college in Madison when he wrote that letter. Five weeks after that he was back at Lake Forest. It was then that his "hopes" were realized. There were letters after that, scores of them. Another then on December 7 last, came from Orpet to the girl. It read:

"Put off going to the doctor as long as possible. Do not tell him that I gave you something to take, will you?" These two little extracts give the beginning and the end of Marian Lambert's love dream.

There is much more in the letters. Orpet never conceded that he was responsible for whatever trouble came on Marian. And he hints at the possibility of other loves in the girl's life.

"Good night, Marian, and above all be good. et me?" he wrote on December 6 and the next day he wrote: "I am absolutely certain that as far

MOOSE STAND FIRM BEHIND COLONEL

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 8.—While yesterday was a red, white and blue fight in the open for Colonel Roosevelt, today assumed in the Progressive convention the character of a gum-shoe expedition against the entrenchments of the Old Guard. A small but willing bunch of hand grenade throwers, wearing masks against the asphyxiating gas of the enemy, went over to see if the regulars had been sufficiently pulverized by the Roosevelt demonstration of the day before to harken to reason.

Frankly, the rank and file did not hope that the expedition would come back with the goods; but it hoped, nevertheless, and the leaders insisted, that the Old Guard would surrender and name the colonel as a harmony nominee before it got through.

Woman Suffrage Wins Place in G. O. P. Platform

By E. R. HARTWELL.

Chicago, June 8.—Woman suffragists today won a hard-fought battle when the committee on resolutions of the Republican National Convention, by a vote of 26 to 21, adopted a plank proposed by Senator Sutherland of Utah, making a general declaration of faith in the principles of woman suffrage. The action of the committee reversed the action of the platform sub-committee, which had rejected the plank.

Chicago, June 8.—Leaders of the boom for Senator Burton of Ohio, practically admitted defeat today and declared they would turn their efforts to landing ex-Governor Myron T. Herrick in second place on the Republican ticket.

Chicago, June 8.—A fight has developed in the permanent organization committee of the Progressive party over the naming of a permanent chairman. It is conceded by a majority of the members of the committee that Raymond Robins, temporary chairman, will not be named. This action is not meant as a slap at Robins, it was stated, but more to recognize some other leading light in the party.

T. R.'S CHANCES GONE, SAYS BRISBANE

By A. BRISBANE.

Convention Hall, Chicago, June 8.—The crowd is here again in the Coliseum, the band playing "Baby Mine." It is quite certain that the name of the Baby is to be Hughes.

It is still raining, and that is the only real news.

Last night some poor souls with plenty of money and anxious to get more, and therefore wanting Root, found a grain of comfort. Somebody said that "young Mr. Bliss had said that Roosevelt would indorse Root and agree to compromise upon him."

Nothing more has been heard about that "bombshell" and nothing more about the story that Roosevelt had left Oyster Bay to come out here and be the "bombshell" himself.

The public that sat through Senator Harding's speech in this building yesterday is annoyed today. It feels like the little boy who got very tired

BUTLER TO NAME THE GOVERNOR

Bay State Executive's Supporters Complete Their Plans to Present His Name to Convention

Chicago, Ill., June 8.—Definite plans to place the name of Governor Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts before the Republican National Convention for the Presidential nomination were adopted shortly after the Governor's arrival in Chicago.

If the convention should be deadlocked at the end of the first day's balloting and it appears that Justice Hughes cannot be nominated at once the name of Governor McCall will be presented to the delegates.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, who accompanied Governor McCall to Chicago, will make the nominating speech.

It appears that the definite arrangements have been made by Fred W. Estabrook, the Republican national committeeman from New Hampshire.

Several of the favorite son candidates who believe they have been side-tracked by the Old Guard in favor of Justice Hughes, are in a mutinous state today.

In retaliation they are disposed to throw their joint strength to some candidate who can defeat Justice Hughes. They do not of course, include the favorite sons who are believed to have been put into the race to corner the delegates for ultimate delivery to the justice.

Governor McCall's friends here have done their utmost to persuade the campaign managers of other favorite sons to pool their strength and unite upon the Massachusetts Governor. Thus far they have met with indifferent success but now that the Governor is here they expect happier results.

Governor McCall entered the convention hall at 11:15. He slipped quietly into his seat at the head of the delegation while the attention of the convention was directed to Senator Harding, who was being elected permanent chairman.

ROOSEVELT WARNS OF CRISIS

Urgent Plea That Convention Rise Above Mere Hope of Winning in Choice of a Standard Bearer

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 8.—Former President Theodore Roosevelt will go to Chicago and address the Republican convention if the delegates request it.

This was his answer to William B. Jackson of Maryland, one of the Republican delegates, who sent a personal invitation asking the colonel to go to Chicago to address the Republican convention in the interests of harmony.

In his reply the colonel referred to the world crisis that exists at this time and made the plea that the Republicans select a man who "shall rise level to the crisis" or in other words keep America at peace and at the same time give her the proper preparedness.

Speaking of President Wilson the colonel declared he "has rendered this people the most evil service that can be rendered to a great democracy."

Colonel Roosevelt charged President Wilson with "dulling the national conscience" and "relaxing the spring of lofty national motive by teaching our people to accept high sounding words as an offset and atonement for shabby deeds."

The colonel declared the people of this country should bend their united energies in the spirit of Lincoln and Washington.

The document, which was intended as a reply to the Jackson invitation, assumed the proportions of a long statement and was one of the most important political pronouncements of the campaign.

The direct attack upon President Wilson came unexpectedly, although in recent speeches he has found fault with the policies of the Wilson administration.

"In view of the present world situation and the position of danger in which the United States finds itself, political difficulties must be forgotten," declared the colonel.

"We must be Americans first," declared the former President.

"Otherwise the nation will crumble into dust."

The slogan of the document was "Americanism Over All."

"For two years," said the ex-President," in the face of awful world cataclysm, this nation has stood supine and helpless and has not in the smallest degree prepared itself to ward off dangers.

The colonel attacked hyphenated citizens. He charged that even at this moment persons of divided allegiance are trying to dictate to the Republican convention. This was an indirect attack upon Justice Hughes, for it has been said time after time that his candidacy has been fostered by German-American interests.

The colonel declared that it will not be easy to rouse the austere self-respect which has been lulled into slumber, but it must be done in the interests of Americanism.

G. O. P. Ready to Nominate Hughes.

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 8.—Justice Charles Evan Hughes will be nominated by the Republican National Convention probably tomorrow unless George von L. Meyer, William Loeb, Jr., and the Roosevelt Republican Committee agree to a Republican who can come with the support of Colonel Roosevelt.

This was decided on today at an early conference of the Republican leaders who are in absolute control of the convention.

They decided there had been enough of "playing horse" with the Progressive convention delegates.

So the leaders mapped out their program to provide for the acceptance without discussion of the temporary roll as presented to the convention by the national committee; to adopt the platform and complete all other business if possible so nominations would be the only thing left for tomorrow.

The only thing that would prevent was delay in the report of the resolutions committee.

SCOUT THIRD TICKET.

The Republican leaders are convinced that Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will not be a candidate on the Progressive ticket when the voters go to the polls next November.

On what they base this confidence they will not say. But it is known that men of the calibre of Oscar S. Straus, who was the candidate of the Moose for Governor of New York four years ago, have made Justice Hughes their second choice and will support him if they cannot put Roosevelt across in the Republican convention.

It will not be surprising if the men best known in the Progressive movement are found lined up in the Hughes camp after the smoke of the battle clears away.

The Republicans are making their real bid for the Progressive support today through the medium of their platform. Senator Harding's appeal to get together failed in the utterance, but the Republican leaders insist today that the platform which finally will be adopted will be strong enough from a Progressive standpoint to satisfy anyone.

The throwing out of the initiative and referendum and recall of judges is the only real thing which the Progressives can object to, they say, and so far as the prohibition and suffrage suggestions are concerned they were brought to the front to be threshed out and fought out before the entire committee.

There was no disguising the hopefulness of the men in control of the convention today. They have discounted any action that the Progressive convention may take, so far as nominations are concerned. The spirit of conciliation is present, but it is a spirit of conciliation on a Republican basis only.

LATE AT WORK.

While the committee on resolutions was hurrying to completion of the platform of that body the convention itself got down to the completion of its organization. Chairman Harding got the delegates in hand at 11:22 and introduced Monsignor Francis C. Kelley as the chaplain of the day to deliver the opening invocation, which was as follows:

> "Oh, God at whose creative power this earth was born, whose hand sustains it, whose voice directs it, whose love keeps it, and whose countenance lights its pathway back to Thee, Oh Ruler, by whose will it is divided into nations, races and tongues that, through wise emulation, the soon may be discovered the hidden stores of Thy bounty, through which happiness, peace and security come to its people; Oh, Orient, from whom proceedeth the Sun of Justice, Oh, Wisdom, seat of Knowledge, Fount of Power and Source of Truth, we bend our heads and raise our hearts to Thee as the first act of Thy Day in acknowledgment of the power that sustains our nation, blesses our people and guides our destinies.
> Direct our counsels and our thoughts to know that Thou art ever first and greatest; to realize that without Thee for our nation we would hope in vain. Grant us to know that even the smallest of good acts, if done for Thine honor and glory, will grow greater than empires in Thy sight. Bless, therefore, every act and thought of ours that is done with the motive of pleasing Thy Divine Majesty. Amen."

MARYLAND FIRST.

The first complete State delegation to get into its seats was that of Maryland. They filed in and flopped down into their chairs with an attitude of dejection and immediately began perusing the morning papers.

The New York and Pennsylvania delegations came in at 11:10 a. m. By that time the crowd was beginning to put in an appearance. Two-thirds of the delegates' seats were filled when Senator Harding came in a minute or two later. The Senator shook hands with a number of friends on the platform, but the delegates made no effort to start a demonstration in his favor.

The private boxes, most of which are assigned to Chicago society leaders, were well filled with good looking, well-dressed women who commented in audible tones on the appearance of the various delegates.

The veteran Chauncey M. Depew got the first scattering round of applause from the gallery as he elbowed his way through the crowded aisles to his seat.

SMOOT REPORTS.

The delegates and spectators were brought to their feet at 11:20 when the band struck up the Star Spangled Banner. The national anthem was applauded in a decorus, timid manner.

In response to the call by the chairman, Senator Smoot reported for the committee on credentials. He was greeted with a scattering of applause as he began to read the decision arrived at last night which upheld the temporary roll as made up by the national committee.

The report of the committee on permanent organization was presented by its chairman, William Hahn, of Ohio. It recommended the temporary organization be made permanent, which was done.

Through motives of delicacy, the motion to this effect was presented by William S. Bennet, the parliamentarian. When Harding stepped forward to assume his duties as permanent chairman the Ohio crowd started a demonstration in his favor. It was the first exhibition of real enthusiasm the convention has witnessed and a number of the favorite sons delegations aided in it. An effort was being made to start a real hurrah time, and Ohio, West Virginia and Maryland took turns in keeping things going.

At the end of two minutes Senator Harding began an attempt to get the delegates back into their seats, but a long-haired Kansas delegate jumped to his chair and began a wild chant of "We Want Harding." The big Ohio solon shook his head and finally got the crowd back into their seats after a spell of four minutes.

Chicago, June 8.—Thomas W. Lawson, strange as it may seem has been as dumb as the proverbial clam since he arrived. Mr. Lawson locked himself into a room at the Hotel Lexington and got in touch by phone with all the leaders he could reach. He ordered the distribution of his elaborate booklet, but he will delay any comment upon the situation until after Governor McCall's arrival. Two of Mr. Lawson's daughters, Mrs. James Lord and Miss Jean Lawson, are with him.

Woman Fined for Hitting Supposed Rival in Nose

The story of how a woman took the law into her own hands and assaulted the wrong person was told in the East Boston Court today during the trial of Mrs. Mabel Seeley of Saratoga street.

According to the police, Mrs. Seeley was jealous of her husband and believed he was receiving attentions from another woman. Deciding to her own satisfaction that the other woman was Mrs. Alice Libby of Lexington street, she visited the latter's house late Monday night.

Mrs. Libby's husband died a short time ago, and she was sitting up waiting for word from a hospital where a sister was undergoing an operation. The bell rang and, believing it to be the message she expected, Mrs. Libby opened the door, whereupon, according to the police, Mrs. Seeley punched her in the nose.

Mrs. Seeley paid a fine of $5 and informed Judge Barnes that she has since learned that Mrs. Libby was not receiving attentions from her husband.

FALL RIVER MAYOR OPPOSES FARE RAISE

Mayor James H. Kay of Fall River, speaking in opposition to the proposed six-cent fare of the Bay State Street Railway before the Public Service Commission today, declared that he objected to the people of his city being taxed to make lines on the New Hampshire border pay dividends.

Both the Mayor and City Solicitor George Grime, who handled the case for the Fall River residents, declared that their whole case would be based on the declaration that the lines in that city were profitable, that the Fall River people were not accountable for the consolidations which have made for the system's deficits, that the people there would gain none of the benefits if the consolidations had proved immensely profitable to the stockholders and that, therefore, they should not be asked to bear the burden of unprofitableness.

WALSH UNABLE TO BE AT CONVENTION

Former Governor David I. Walsh, one of the four Massachusetts delegates at large to the Democratic National Convention, will not attend the St. Louis gathering. Mr. Walsh, who has been enjoying a four months' tour of the Orient, had planned to return to this country on the steamer from Manila, which arrived at Vancouver last Saturday. For some reason he was not on board, and his brother, Major Thomas W. Walsh, received a cablegram, dated Manila, this morning, which reads:

"No passage before June 15. Home July. Convention impossible."

One of the four alternates at large—Vincent Brogna of Boston, Oscar Rocheleau of Worcester, Thomas F. Higgins of Fall River, and Edmund D. Codman of Boston—will be chosen to act for the former governor.

WILSON BREAKS CUSTOM OF 50 YEARS

Washington, June 8.—Breaking the custom followed since the Civil War of appointing colored men as registers of deeds of the District of Columbia, President Wilson today sent to the Senate the nomination of John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman for the District, for that post.

It seems that while 12,000 people at this Republican convention were dozing through Mr. Harding's speech, a band of patriots listening to Raymond Robins—a real radical and first-class man—at the Progressive convention enjoyed themselves immensely. Robins and Roosevelt were cheered for an hour and thirty-six minutes.

But you know the story of the man who lost a thousand dollars in Canfield's gambling house and then had all the champagne and ham he wanted free. He said mournfully "you can't eat a thousand dollars' worth of ham."

IFS DO NO GOOD.

And even an hour and thirty-six minutes of cheering does not console the politician who finds that he is getting the cheering in the wrong place, realizes that he has lost his chance.

Can anyone imagine a bigger IF than the IF of this Roosevelt soliloquy?

"IF I had supported Taft win or lose. IF I had remained a good, obedient Republican. IF I had remained a good Republican what would be happening to me now? I would be having the cheering now and all the fun of the campaign later. Or IF I had just kept quiet about the Germans and allowed them to sympathize with THEIR German ancestors as I sympathize with MY Welsh and other assorted ancestors, I would now be available, and my enemies would lack my one good excuse for rejecting me."

But IFS do no good. It is quarter past eleven. The band has finished playing "The Star Spangled Banner." The crowd has sat down again and the convention will commence. Nobody looks for anything very gay, but there is always hope.

The Right Rev. Francis C. Kelley, D. D., has finished a short prayer, and the band is playing "Rock of Ages" with the help of a set of chimes up in the gallery. Yesterday a Protestant prayed for the Republican convention. Today the prayer is offered by a Catholic. Tomorrow a Jewish Rabbi will pray and complete the circle.

The management has taken all reasonable precautions.

But next week the Democrats will also pray in three directions, so that neither will have an advantage and the question still remains, "How can they beat Wilson?"

Yesterday the convention remained sitting while the Protestant prayed. Today, by request, it stood up while the Catholic priest made his prayer.

BROAD-MINDED NATION.

Tomorrow, if religious custom were to be followed, the men in the audience should sit with their hats on while the rabbi delivers his prayer.

This is an interesting, broad-minded nation. The old French Pagan king gave the Christian God one chance. When he won the battle he made all of his people Christian, killing many nice looking old Druids in the process.

In our day we try all religions one after the other—that is to say, all the most popular religions. There are many here who think a competent Christian Scientist would not do this convention any harm.

It is moved and decided that yesterday's temporary organization be made permanent. The convention is now ready for business. Harding of Ohio is permanent chairman, and bowing on his little separate platform.

He is cheered and applauded more liberally than yesterday, perhaps because the crowd knows that the worst is over and that the speech has been made.

There is some "whooping" and "wheeing" from the delegates on the floor, but these disturbers are not genuine. Harding sounds with the gavel. Some delegates are trying hard to give a real imitation of yesterday's Bull Moose enthusiasm. It lasts altogether only three minutes.

Senator Smoot, from Utah, offers a resolution letting in delegates from Hawaii and Porto Rico. While Mr. Smoot and others are arranging details Mr. Bryan is in the press stand holding a reception and enjoying himself thoroughly.

Mr. Bryan has a right to feel proud of himself when he looks at this convention of eminently respectable milk and water gentlemen.

When Bryan is in a convention, as a member, it is never dull and he is able to say that nobody can say what is going to be done until everybody has heard from him.

You will know what he thinks of today's session in later editions, as he is reporting the convention for the Hearst papers.

DEPEW ORATES.

Here is the venerable Chauncey Depew standing on the platform with his hands behind his back. He has been reported by Stimson of New York and one other and referred to by Senator Harding as "that grand old spokesman of the Republican party."

His arrival seems appropriate in this gathering. Mr. Depew, more than eighty years old, stands absolutely straight, talks with a powerful voice that is heard all over the hall, speaks of the days of Garfield and reminds the crowd that he has been talking for the Republican party for sixty years.

Mr. Depew thinks there is a relation between the campaign of 1856 and that upon which we are now entering. The question, he says, is "Americanism." Mr. Depew quotes the Declaration of Independence, says that in the war "civilization is at stake and Christianity is doubted."

He adds, "We thank God we are out of it. The question is, shall we have from the Republicans Americanism that will keep us out of it or a mollycoddle policy that will get us into that din?"

Wilson will answer: "Well, mollycoddleism has kept you out of it."

Much applause greets the powerful old man. The gathering, made up largely of men old and half worn out before sixty, likes to see this man past eighty talk to twelve thousand people and make all of them hear.

Chauncey Depew knows his American audience and gives them solid patriotism all through. He tells how Seward dealt with Mexico and the French emperor, disregarding the threat that Austria would interfere.

"Seward said, 'Get out' and he added 'Sheridan is on the border.' You could have played checkers on their coat tails they got out so fast."

Mr. Depew played no favorites. He told how Grover Cleveland talked to England in connection with Venezuela and even mentioned Roosevelt kindly with "Pericardis alive, or Rassuli dead."

(Mr. Brisbane's account of the convention as it progresses will appear in later editions.)

BRANDEIS THANKS WILSON FOR HELP

Washington, June 8—Louis D. Brandeis, newly installed associate justice of the Supreme Court, called on President Wilson to pay his respects. He was received in the Blue Room of the White House by the Chief Executive, who congratulated him warmly. The President was thanked for assistance rendered in obtaining the justice's confirmation.

Leader, Even More Than a Candidate, What G.O.P. Needs, Says W. R. Hearst

Actions of Convention Show What Republican Party Really Requires Is a Guardian—Progressive Policies More Than Progressive Party's Votes, Is Direct Necessity in Present Crisis.

By W. R. HEARST

Chicago, June 8.—At the opening day of the Republican convention it became clearly evident that what the Republican party needs even more than a candidate is a LEADER.

Indeed, if the proceedings of following days are to be as barren of modern thought and as blind to modern conditions and requirements as the proceedings of the first day, I will make my statement stronger and say that what the Republican party really needs is a GUARDIAN.

If ever there was a keynote speech that missed the key and struck a flat note, it was the elaborate and painfully protracted elocutionary effort of Senator Harding.

Senator Harding CAN make a good speech and the reason he distinctly did NOT make one is probably because he was endeavoring to express the ideas of the governing board of this convention.

These ideas, from the reception they received and the impression they created, are obviously out of date and out of harmony with the spirit of the majority of the delegates to this convention and of the majority of the citizens of this country.

The world progresses, and whether a man acknowledges himself a Progressive or not, he is caught in the current and swept along as part of the progress of the world.

The world is being educated every day to the recognition of new conditions and the acceptance of new principles.

The ideas which seemed radical yesterday seem rational today, and the methods and habits we once hesitated to abandon we now strenuously refuse to resume.

"Backward, turn backward, Oh Time, in thy flight," is pretty in poetry, but not practical in politics, and to use the phrase of the man in the street, Senator Harding's speech was "nineteenth century stuff."

We have heard it all before. We have heard the same things said in the same way. We know that the Republican party saved the Union. We know that it gave the nation protection. We know that it did not build the navy, but that the Democratic Administration of Grover Cleveland rescued the navy from the disgraceful scandals into which the Republican party had plunged it. We know that the Republican party has done a lot of good things and a lot of bad things.

The public is perfectly willing to forgive the bad things the party has done, for the sake of the good things the party has done, and to wipe the slate clean and start anew.

But the question before this convention and before the people of this country is not what the Republican party did in the LAST CENTURY, but what it is going to do in THIS CENTURY—what it is going to do in THIS CAMPAIGN.

Here is a situation which cries for constructive policy, and the best that the keynote speech of the Republican convention has to offer is a compendium of ancient history.

In the light of the events of the day it looks as if only a small part of the Republican party had remained in the Progressive camp, but that this small part contained the heart and brains of Republicanism.

The Republican party needs the POLICIES of the Progressive party more than it needs the VOTERS of the Progressive party.

The harmony program of the Republican party, if it have any, the plan of union with the Progressive party should contemplate first, above everything else, THE ADOPTION OF THE POLICIES OF THE PROGRESSIVE PARTY.

These are the policies of the independent voters of today, regardless of politics, and without the support of the independent voters not the Republican party nor any other party can hope to succeed in this election.

The Republican party need not hesitate to adopt the sound, radical American principles of the Progressive party. These are in no way exclusively the possession of the Progressive party.

The Progressive party absorbed them from the independent thinkers of this country, and the independent thinkers of the country are THE WHOLE ENLIGHTENED CITIZENSHIP.

The world is advancing, and is advancing with a rush. More material and scientific progress has been made in the past sixteen years than has been made in a century before. And more political progress has been made in the last sixteen years than in a century before.

The Republican party must meet modern conditions and modern requirements or go out of existence, and if it fail to meet them in its platform and in its policies, as it signally failed to meet them in its keynote speech, IT WILL GO OUT OF EXISTENCE.

I say that the Republican party needs a leader—a leader who can hear and understand the voice of the people.

I suggest if the Republican party is unwilling to nominate Theodore Roosevelt for office, that it at least retain him as advisory counsel.

It needs a voice. It needs guidance. It needs light. It needs a mind. It needs a soul. It is stumbling dully in the dark toward doomed and deserved defeat.

PROGRESSIVES FOR ROOSEVELT UNLESS REPUBLICANS SPLIT

By HUGH S. MILLER.

Chicago, June 8.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will be nominated by acclamation on the Bull Moose ticket unless leaders of the Old Guard come to a speedy agreement with the Progressives.

This was the forcefully-expressed opinion of Bull Moose leaders at the opening of the second day's session in the Auditorium Theatre here.

The convention was formed by the most tumultuous ovation for any prospective presidential candidate in political history. For an hour and thirty-six minutes Roosevelt-mad Progressives cheered their idol, demanded that he head the ticket and defied their leaders to stop them.

Attempts will be made to hold Bull Moose delegates in line until tomorrow noon, when an ultimatum served on the Old Guard will be terminated.

This ultimatum was drawn up by the Progressive delegation from Idaho. It states in black and white that unless a harmony committee to confer on candidates and a platform is named by the time stipulated the Progressives will name a third party ticket headed by Roosevelt and Governor Johnson of California.

It is reported that other Progressive delegations will fall in line, and that the will of the delegates will be consummated despite possible efforts of George W. Perkins and other leaders to head them off.

Governor Hiram Johnson of California—The delegates want Roosevelt. They will put him over in spite of any interference.

Victor Murdock, chairman of Progressive National Committee—There is nothing to do but name Roosevelt. Nothing can stop the tide in his favor.

E. A. Van Valkenbergh, Bull Moose leader from Philadelphia—Colonel Roosevelt himself could not head off the nomination now. During the demonstration Colonel Roosevelt was called on the telephone at Oyster Bay. "Bully," he is said to have remarked when news of the wild cheering came to him.

Ten Thousand Plucky Women Marching in the Cold Rain

Their Noble Earnestness and Devotion Formed a Striking Contrast to the Milk and Water, Lukewarm Masculine Politicians of the Republican Convention.

By International News Service.

Chicago, June 8.—The Republican convention yesterday amounted to this—it was dull, dismal, without spirit, life or enthusiasm, not worth discussion.

The Progressive convention may be described as follows:

It was vociferous, noisy, and it won't amount to anything. The only monument to the Bull Moose will be Taft's political tombstone, that is all it will ever build.

BUT THE PARADE OF THE WOMEN IN THE COLD WIND AND RAIN—that is something to talk about, something worth while, inspiring and noble.

The women had said that they would march AND THEY DID MARCH, ALTHOUGH THE HEAVY DOWNPOUR DRENCHED THEM AND THE COLD WIND CHILLED THEM.

They were determined to show the men that they are in earnest in their demand for the vote, and they proved their earnestness nobly.

Among the women who marched unprotected, through the storm, standing or walking for hours in the cold were thousands of women with white hair, marching side by side with thousands of other women in their early youth.

There were many that had sacrificed a day's pay, that they might prove their interest in a great question; there were others among the richest and best known women of Chicago and other cities, sacrificing comfort, risking health, in a splendid demonstration of solidarity of loyalty to their sisters.

None of these women of Chicago ask anything FOR THEMSELVES. THEY HAVE THE VOTE ALREADY. Their parade was a protest against injustice to their sisters in other States. It was intended to serve notice upon the Republicans planning to rule the country for four years that they must include JUSTICE TO WOMEN in their plans.

No moderately intelligent man could see that parade yesterday and doubt that woman suffrage will soon be a reality.

No man of decent instincts could see the parade without a feeling of shame and humiliation at the thought that man's selfishness, indifference and brutality should compel women, the mothers of men, to expose themselves thus in the effort to get that which should be given gladly and gratefully.

However, yesterday's parade was more than a protest against the arrogance and stupidity of men, more than a rebuke to their selfishness, more than a warning to politicians as to what they may expect from three millions of voting women.

That parade was a splendid demonstration of woman's nobility of character, and unselfish devotion OF HER COURAGE THAT THROUGHOUT HISTORY HAS ALWAYS PUT MEN TO SHAME.

You could see in that parade a woman past sixty, walking in the rain on the slippery streets ON CRUTCHES to prove her willingness to do her duty. You see Marion Talbot, a dean in the University of Chicago, walking unprotected at the head of a division, earnest, dignified, crowning a life of teaching and self-sacrifice with a fine example and rebuke for men.

What a disgrace that 10,000 women, among the best in the country, should be compelled to expose themselves, in the cold, the wind and the rain in order to prove TO THEIR OWN SONS AND BROTHERS that they are entitled to justice and political freedom.

Whatever was lacking in that pitiful, weak Republican convention; whatever was feeble and discouraging in the attitude of the masculine politician was more than made up for in that fine exhibition of womanly devotion and courage.

When the WOMEN, THE MOTHERS, are all right there is no need to worry about their sons.

Platform Builders Agree on Mexico

By E. R. HARTWELL,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 8.—The declaration of a vigorous Republican Mexican policy was agreed upon by the platform builders of the Republican convention. Informal conferences perfected the plank tentatively drawn up by the sub-committees in charge of the platform.

After expressing sympathy with the Mexican people and deploring the murders of Mexican and American citizens by lawless bandits, the plank provides:

"It is the duty of the United States to protect American citizens in their lives and property, both on the Mexican border and in Mexico, wherever they may be found."

This provision was adopted to conciliate Senator Fall of New Mexico, who was a member of the sub-committee that made a fight for "an intervention plank." Senator Fall declared that the plank was satisfactory to him and asserted the demand for the protection of Americans "in Mexico" met his demands.

Platform builders exerted every influence to eliminate any fight in the resolutions committees and on the floor over the Americanism plank. The plank was drawn in general terms and they declared that they would be able to conciliate the opposition.

The settlement of the Mexican and Americanism questions left two disputed planks to be settled by the resolutions committee or to be fought out on the floor of the convention. These were declaratins for woman suffrage and for national prohibition.

Strong lobbies were at work for both propositions, and although the platform sub-committee had eliminated both of them the resolutions committee was confronted by a vigorous demand for their inclusion in the platform.

Senator Sutherland of Utah, who led the fight in the platform sub-committee for the suffrage plank, declared it was beaten by a vote of only 5 to 4, and he went into the full committee meeting determined to make a vigorous fight for the plank.

Although members of the sub-committee would not make public the vote, it was understood that Senators Sutherland, Borah and Fall and Representative Madden voted for the suffrage plank, and that Senators Lodge, Oliver and Wadsworth, Paul Howland of Ohio and Charles H. Clark of Connecticut voted against it.

WOMEN PARADE FOR SUFFRAGE PLANK

By International News Service.

Chicago, June 8.—Four thousand women marched miles through a drizzling rain in a plea to the Republican convention to incorporate a plank for equal suffrage in the party's platform.

"If they've got nerve enough to march in this rain, I've got nerve enough to stand out in it and watch them," said a G. O. P. delegate.

By IRVIN S. COBB.

Copyright, 1916, by the Central Press Association.

Chicago, June 8.—It is a pleasing and traditional custom of the more astute political writers—and what seasoned political writers of the present generation is there among us who does not toot the astute upon the slightest provocation?—to use the word "significant" is describing this or that political manifestation in advance of the main event.

When he is in doubt whether a sudden development means Jones is gaining ground, or Robertson or Smith is slipping something over on Brown, he merely states that the newest happening is highly significant and lets it go at that. Then, no matter what the outcome, he is safe. He has not slipped up in his deductions, and his diagnosis has stood the test.

I have no desire to steal a pet idea of our experienced convention reporters, and yet why not? The notion is not copyrighted.

Everybody's doing it, and anyhow everybody will be doing it before the present week is over.

SIGNIFICANT SUNDRIES.

Succumbing therefore to the temptation, I take this opportunity of pointing out sundry happenings which have come to my direct attention here in Chicago during the past twenty-four hours, including them in the category of the deeply significant events, although just what they may or may not be significant of, I leave to the calm and unbiased judgment of the readers.

Besides, he is in the better position to judge. He is not on the spot, torn by conflicting emotions, racked by doubts, harassed by rumor and by counter-rumor, stunned by loud sounds, and buffeted to and fro among frenzied multitudes.

I assume he is sitting in some comparatively quiet retreat with an open mind.

To him, as he reads about it, the machinery of a great party in convention assembled probably suggests a mighty engine moving in its ordained orbit with dignified and rythmic swings.

He doesn't understand that when you behold the operations of the party's machine—any party's machine—at close range, it makes you think of a merry-go-round running wild and patronized almost exclusively by the recently escaped inmates of the hopeless ward of a large lunatic asylum.

He thinks of the leaders as the managing directors of a powerful and well-handled organization.

Here upon the scene we can but liken them to a lot of keepers whose maniacal charges have for the moment forgotten that even a madhouse has its rules and regulations.

Returning to our subject, I would beg leave to list and slump, under the general heading of significant occurrences, the following:

Yesterday, the keynote speech of the temporary chairman of the national convention contained no direct reference to the war between the States.

They tell me this is the first time since that war began, that the official keynoter of a Republican convention has failed to mention at greater or less length—the first time the chosen orator has failed to give his party all the credit for the preservation of the Union and the freeing of the slaves.

In his speech he referred neither directly nor indirectly to the debt of gratitude which the Republican party is supposed to owe the negro, nor to the debt of gratitude which the negro is assumed to owe the Republican party. As I recall, he did not mention the black race once.

In his speech he called the roll only of national leaders who are dead. He spoke of Lincoln, but he did not mention a single living leader by name, nor hint at a single one by inference. And most particularly did he avoid all reference of whatsoever nature to a certain gentleman now living and in the very pink of health and condition, who as a Republican sat in the White House for one full term and the larger part of another term.

At another convention, proceeding simultaneously, here in the city of Chicago, the delegates did mention this person, mentioned him with marked enthusiasm for upward of an hour and a half continuously, but not so Senator Harding. He walked as wide of Colonel Roosevelt as though the Colonel had been a pesthouse.

Finally, Senator Harding in his keynote speech made no open plea for harmony within the party. He threw out no direct overtures of peace and reconciliation to the faction who left the reservation four years ago, taking most of the reservation with them.

SECTIONAL GHOST BURIED.

From these developments which, as I said before, I have for the sake of convenience lumped together in the significant column, it is possible that the reader may draw divers deductions. He may go so far as to assume the following:

First—That the ghost of Sectionalism is finally buried for good and all, in all the parties.

Second—That the Republican party is ceasing to regard the colored man as a political asset, since in the States where he is most numerous he does very little voting, anyway, and is making a bid for the white vote of the heretofore heavily Democratic Far South.

Third—That Senator Harding thinks that all the great Republicans are dead, or at least that none of the living ones is of sufficient amplitude or bulk to entitle him to individual mention.

Fourth—That the Senator could not exactly figure out in his own mind what sort of an explosion would follow the mention of Colonel Roosevelt's name in a regular Republican convention at this parlous period of the proceedings, and wasn't taking any chances either way.

Or, then again, the reader may not so deduce.

If there are four separate things the matter with the Republican National Convention at this moment—mind you, I don't say that such is the case, but only that if such is the case—I want to make a guess as to at least three of them.

Three of these things are Colonel Roosevelt.

A BUSINESS MAN STATES REASONS

Boston Man Who Resides at No. 3 Pearl Terrace Is Endorsing Plant Juice.

Ninety per cent. of the ill health can be traced to the stomach, since its chronic derangement is nothing but the slow self-poisoning of the vital organs of the body. When the stomach fluid grows weak and unhealthy, the food remains too long in the stomach, ferments and generates foul, poisonous gases, which produce a fullness or bloating, sometimes creating an unpleasant pressure in the neighborhood of the heart, causing fear of heart disease.

M. G. STAPLES

Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic, acts as a combatant and strikes directly at these troubles and the results are astonishing. That this is what Plant Juice is doing is being demonstrated every day by the numerous testimonials received from local people who have given Plant Juice a fair trial.

Mr. M. G. Staples, who resides at No. 3 Pearl Terrace, Somerville, Mass., has lived in that city for 45 years and is well known in church and business circles, states:

"I had suffered from stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia, torpid liver and constipation for three years past. I had dizzy spells, headaches and no appetite. I was told that I had nervous indigestion. I could not eat any meats or vegetables; if I did, I suffered from gas and bloating and severe pains all over my body. I was very nervous and restless at night, and my sleep did me no good. When I arose in the morning I was just as tired as before retiring the night before. Now, I can truthfully state to the Boston public that I have taken three bottles of Plant Juice, and I don't have an ache or pain; I can eat any kind of food and it all agrees with me. I sleep and eat fine, and I feel that Plant Juice has cured me all right, and I am recommending it to all of my friends."

The Plant Juice man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

BRYAN POINTS CONVENTION CONTRASTS

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

Copyright, 1916, by William J. Bryan.

Chicago, June 8.—Two conventions are running full blast. The delegates in the two bodies are hoping to reach an agreement on platform and candidate, but so far they are entirely distinct and separate. They differ in several respects.

In size the regular Republican convention has the advantage. The Coliseum, in which the Republican Convention is held, seats some 7,000, while the Auditorium, in which the Progressives meet, could hardly accommodate 4,000.

In enthusiasm the Progressives have much the advantage, probably because they have their candidate picked, while the Republican Convention has so many favorite sons under consideration that the delegates are not at liberty to join in applauding any one aspirant.

Temporary Chairman Harding did not mention any candidate, while Temporary Chairman Robins set the Progressive Convention afire by his eulogy of Colonel Roosevelt.

While Senator Harding's chief points were greeted with applause, it was not the kind of applause that reverberates.

Roosevelt's name, on the contrary, was the signal for cheering, shouting, singing and parading that lasted more than an hour and a half.

If the Progressive enthusiasm could be grafted upon the Republican convention, it would be a great success, but so far, the noise and the numbers have not been brought into harmonious co-operation.

It is not likely that the two conventions will differ materially in their tariff planks. If one goes farther than the other in a worshipful reverence for the policy of protection it will be due to skill in the use of words, rather than to any difference in purpose or position.

If one can judge from present indications, the preparedness platform will be more emphatic than the plank on this subject in the Republican platform.

The Progressives are talking preparedness more extravagantly than the old line Republicans, possibly because they put the candidate forward as a pioneer in the preparedness propaganda.

It is evident that an effort is going to be made by both conventions to claim a monopoly of the Americanism of the country and they are going so to define Americanism as to include industrial preparedness at home as well as military and naval preparedness for international conflicts.

It is some months since the Republican leaders conceived the idea of tying the protective system to the army and navy.

It will be remembered that Congressman Mann included industrial preparedness in the qualified indorsement which he gave the administration. Protection was looking for a crutch and it was quick to avail itself of the support offered by the preparedness propaganda.

It was very easy for a high tariff advocate to support a policy requiring larger appropriations because larger appropriations compel larger tax levies. Regulars and Progressives alike recommend a tariff as a source from which to draw increased revenues.

They defend tariff taxes upon consumption on the ground that they are felt less than direct taxes. It is the old defence, viz.: That by means of it more feathers can be obtained from the goose without squawking.

Those who attempt to measure the sentiment in favor of bigger appropriations for the army and navy by parades must not overlook the fact that those who are pecuniarily interested in the return to a high tariff fall easy victims to any scares which give an excuse for the collection of more revenue.

The Progressives, following the suggestion of Colonel Roosevelt, will probably advocate universal military service, the mention of which by Mr. Robins brought forth great applause. If the regular Republicans have this in mind it was not referred to in the speech made by temporary Chairman Harding.

Equal suffrage is quite sure to be endorsed by the Progressives, and it may receive favorable consideration in the Republican convention.

It will, if the delegates give expression to the admiration which they must feel for the thousands of women who braved the storm and marched in the suffrage parade yesterday afternoon.

TAFT'S BROTHER SEES ONLY HUGHES

Chicago, June 8.—Henry W. Taft, brother of former President Taft, said:

I believe that Justice Hughes will be nominated on the second ballot. I came here hoping for the nomination and to work for the nomination of Elihu Root. I am convinced that a majority of the delegates prefer Hughes. I shall not be surprised if a majority for Hughes develops before New York is reached on the rollcall. I find little sentiment among the Republicans for Colonel Roosevelt.

SECOND M'MILLAN RELIEF PARTY TO GO

New York, June 8.—Under command of Ensign Fitzhugh Green, U. S. N., a second relief expedition is to be dispatched to the Far North to aid the marooned Crockerland exploration party.

The American Museum of Natural History, which made the final arrangements by cable to Copenhagen, Denmark, announced that the rescue would be attempted of not only Donald B. McMillan and his men of the original expedition, but also of the first relief expedition, commanded by Dr. Edmund O. Hovey.

Dr. Hovey is supposed to be in the region of North Star Bay, Greenland, while his ship, the Cluett, remains jammed in the snow at Parker Bay.

CAN YOU imagine
A YOUNG man
WITH TWO suits of clothes
AND EXPENSE money
AND EVERYTHING,
COMING all the way
FROM San Francisco
TO THE convention
AND NOT getting in?
I COULDN'T get a ticket
FROM ANYBODY.
I WENT all over
AND SHOWED 'em my picture
IN THE PAPER
AND LET THEM feel me,
HOW WET I was,
RUNNING around
IN THE RAIN.
AND ALL they said was
YES, IT WAS too bad
I WAS so wet,
AND I MUST be careful
OR I'D BE SICK.
AND WITH that
I GOT in a taxi
WITH A SUFFRAGETTE,
WHO WAS hanging over
FROM WEARING badges.
AND SOMEWHERE
ALONG the road
SHE GOT OUT
IN the rain
OR THE LAKE
OR WHATEVER it was.
AND I came over
TO THE Great Northern,
WHERE I DRY my clothes
NIGHTS,
AND SAT in my window
ALL afternoon,
WATCHING MEN
IN A TALL building
ACROSS the street
MAKING pants.
I THINK they're crippled
OR SOMETHING.
THEY SIT on tables,
AND FROM where I am
I CAN'T TELL
WHAT THEY do with their legs.
I THINK they double them up
UNDERNEATH THEM.
I TRIED to do it.
AND WHILE I was trying
MY WIFE came in,
AND ALL afternoon
SHE'S BEEN watching me.
SHE THINKS I'm crazy,
AND I'M not.
I'M JUST killing time
TILL I GET a ticket
TO THE CONVENTION,
OR TILL it's over,
AND I CAN GO to St. Louis
WITH THE Democrats,
OR GET a job
MAKING PANTS.
I THANK you.

COLONEL HAS "HAD HIS SAY"

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 8.—Although Chicago is the centre of the country's politics at present it might be said that one eye of the nation is upon Colonel Roosevelt, who is just now living the life of a hermit at Sagamore Hill.

The best the reporters get is a cordial greeting and a new crop of humorous stories. The colonel is gaiety itself. He smiles broadly, exchanges repartee and gives warm hand clasps, but as to interviews there is none.

Colonel Roosevelt spends the day lounging about the grounds of Sagamore Hill or in his library, dressed in khaki and a soft shirt, listening to long distance conversations over the telephone or receiving long telegraphic reports from his supporters in Chicago. He is keeping his finger pressed tightly to the pulse of developments in Chicago, and he is also keeping mum.

Asked if he would accept the nomination for President upon the Progressive ticket, the Colonel held up a warning hand, exclaiming:

"I have already said what I had to say."

CURED HIMSELF OF DRINKING

Los Angeles Man Gives Out a Simple Home Recipe That Banished His Desire for Liquor.

Mr. Carl Smith, living at 615½ S. Grand Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif., cured himself of the liquor habit with a simple home recipe. In a recent statement Mr. Smith said: "I took two high-priced treatments for the liquor habit, both of which failed. Then I heard of the following simple recipe, which I tried. It quickly banished my desire for liquor and greatly benefited my health. To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of muriate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound and 10 grains of pepsin. Take a teaspoonful three times a day. It is perfectly harmless, and as it has no taste, color or smell it can be given secretly in coffee, tea, milk or in food. Any druggist can put up this recipe at very little cost, and it is a wonderful remedy."

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART.

Copyright, 1916, by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Chicago, June 8.—"Now is the time for all good men"——

I am new to the newspaper game. So when a youth with a fixed glare and an intense manner follows me up demanding material for the wires it makes me nervous.

However, I succeeded in obtaining three interviews.

The first was with Senator Boise Penrose.

I had waited a long time for Senator Penrose. Men came and went, the suffrage parade went by outside. It rained and I waited.

More men came and went. The Liberty Bell and more suffragists went by outside and I waited.

At last I was admitted to the Presence. Senator Penrose said:

> The Republicans are working entirely in harmony. Practically the same men who worked during the convention of 1912 are working now. No steam roller is being used; no methods but open ones. We have no idea who the candidate will be. We expect to know by midnight Saturday night. The platform is not ready. But it will certainly contain mention of Preparedness and a protective tariff.

Having received this information, I waited to see Senator Oliver. He said:

> The platform is not ready, but it will certainly contain mention of Preparedness and a protective tariff. The Republicans are working entirely in harmony. Practically the same men who worked during the convention of 1912 are working now. No steam roller is being used; no methods but open ones. We have no idea who the candidate will be. We expect to know before midnight Saturday night.

Later on I talked with other delegates, men who are supposed to know the secrets of the situation.

One of these men drew me into a corner, and closed the door. Then he whispered:

> Practically the same men who worked during the convention of 1912 are working now. No steam roller is being used; no methods but open ones. We have no idea who the candidate will be. We expect to know before midnight Saturday night. The Republicans are working entirely in harmony.

Confused by these differing but authoritative statements, I finally gave up, and sought no more interviews. But from what these men have said, we may at least gather that harmony prevails.

INSPIRATION CUMULATIVE.

A certain heaviness hung over the opening session of the Republican convention. Perhaps it was the weather, which continued atrocious. Perhaps it is because a certain amount of work must be done before the real business commences. Perhaps it was because the enthusiasm of these conventions is a cumulative thing, arranged to cover a certain period, and to increase every day.

There is something rather inspiring in a crowd, even in a wet, bedraggled and slightly dispirited crowd. People are more imposing in the mass than individually. And it is not very often that we gather together from the uttermost parts of the country for anything more serious than a football game.

Veteran newspapermen filled the press boxes, men of many battles, politic and otherwise. They looked interested or bored, as their pose might be, but one and all they looked intelligent, keen and humorous. They knew everyone. They knew what most of the delegates stood for. They knew, as well as any in the hall knew, what the convention would do.

I sat in the press box. But as I was among these men, but not of them, I may write of them. Next to me an artist was sketching heads. He drew the Governor of Ohio, who was chewing gum at the time. He drew Medill McCormick, lean and Irish in type and looking extremely weary. He drew Boies Penrose's broad, heavy back, and Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania, wide of face and narrow of head, with gray hair parted in the middle and shaggy gray eyebrows. Even before the prayer we had our pictures taken, the flash sort of opening gun. Two men with cameras stood on a press desk behind me. One of them was not quite ready when the flash came, and what he said I shall not repeat.

EVERYONE A DARLING.

I never see a crowd of men together that I do not recall that picture of Charles Dana Gibson's of a lot of men of different types standing in a row. Underneath it said: "Never mind; everyone of them is somebody's darling."

Bearing this in mind, I looked them over. It is strange how little men from different parts of the country differ in appearance, especially without their hats. Massachusetts and Montana, Maine and Texas, any man, any delegate, might have come from any State. With this difference, perhaps that the New England men had in some ways rather the advantage. The Massachusetts delegation, for instance, had some of the thinking types; but they looked conservative. New York and Pennsylvania delegates showed prosperous, sleek types, men with corporation faces, many of them; few fine faces, but many strong ones. Average Americans, I should say, hairless heads predominating, not particularly idealistic, not annoyingly patriotic. But good solid citizens, nevertheless, to be trusted to do the safe thing politically.

HARDING'S PHRASES CATCH.

The dominant figure was unquestionably Senator Harding. The delegates are saying that he made a great speech. I do not consider it a great speech. But it was a good one. He reiterated many platitudes; he stole some of Theodore Roosevelt's thunder, and both platitudes and thunder were rapturously applauded.

Here and there he said a statesmanly thing which passed apparently unnoticed or received timid recognition. It is unfortunate that such a speech will be recalled, not in its general trend, probably, but by one or two of those catch phrases which the Americans have a habit of picking up and remembering.

His mention of the Democratic "Watchful Waiting and Wobbling Warfare" is one.

That the Democrats "First Coddled Villa as a Patriot and then Chased Him as a Bandit" is another.

A reporter near me looked up to say "That is the only statesmanship we have now, to pull a clever phrase."

"The Nation Worth Dying For Is Worth Living For" as still another.

His appeal for Harmony met great applause.

Disgruntled delegates, ignorant of the important statements made me by Senator Penrose and others, are talking of the steam roller, which I have been assured does not exist.

They are threatening to vote the Democratic ticket on the 7th of next November. They are grumbling in no uncertain tones. But they will do what they are told when the time comes.

"NOW IS THE TIME FOR ALL GOOD MEN TO COME TO THE AID OF THE PARTY."

Ready, Men!
OUR ANNUAL SUMMER
MARK-DOWN SALE

This sale demands— and is going to get —the quickest kind of action.

Our Annual Summer Mark-Down Sale has been advanced several weeks, solely for one reason—WE ARE OVERSTOCKED.

We had our ear to the ground last Fall. We heard the cry of "Higher Prices for Woolens," "Scarcity of Dyes," etc. We rushed to get in on the ground floor, and now we find ourselves loaded to the garret.

Plainly, there is but one thing to do—UNLOAD. The Shepard Clothing Store is little over a year old. We must uphold our reputation for carrying none but new goods. We must insure clean racks for next Fall. We must unload now, even at the cost of MARKING DOWN all our suits.

That's the simple story of this sale. The slashed prices should start a stampede of buyers. It can't help being a runaway event, because Shepard high-grade clothes at such prices seldom—if ever—come thus early in the season.

Our entire stock of better suits is included—and this year it is a stock of such vastness that we can fit any man in fashion or fabric; we can surely suit him in body and mind. And instead of the regular prices of $20 to $35, he need pay only

$17.50 for all suits formerly $25

$21.50 for all suits formerly $30 & $35

Progressives, in Ringing Platform, Call for MAN to Guide Nation in Crisis

By GEORGE T. FRY,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 8.—From an all-night session of the Progressive party's committee on resolutions was born a platform that not only repeats the radical pronouncements of four years ago, but adds new features of striking character.

The platform was tailored to fit Colonel Roosevelt only. Specifically the creed says that each and every item of the old platform, which was hotly attacked by the conservatives, shall be considered as picked up bodily and included in the present statement of faith.

Then it demands full woman suffrage, a navy second to England only, a standing army of 250,000 men, universal training, but not service with the training paid for out of the federal treasury; a reserve force that will be distinctively federal and not national guard, and protective tariff.

The platform couples the issues with the man who is to lead and, while saying that the Moose will support any man who measures up to the platform, thus leaving down the bars for an agreed candidate, it so restricts the specifications as to what the man who acts as the exponent of the issues shall be that there is nobody at the counter attraction at the Coliseum who can fill the specifications.

A sub-committee of the resolutions committee went into session at 10 o'clock to make a final revision of the draft. It will be adopted this afternoon when the convention meets at 2 o'clock.

THE PLATFORM.

The first draft, subject to minor changes, is in substance as follows:

This is the year of decision for the nation's future. As we now decide so shall we go forward in righteousness and power or backward in degradation and weakness.

Our present choice of path will be irrevocable. The tradition of isolation has been ended. The United States is now a part of a world system of civilization. We stand or fall as we prepare to take our parts in peace or war and hold our own therein.

As members of an international community we are subject to certain basic duties.

> To secure the rights and equal treatment of our citizens, native or naturalized, on land and sea, without regard to race, creed or nativity.
> To guard the honor and uphold the just influence of our nation; to maintain the integrity of international law.

These are the cornerstones of civilization. We must be strong to defend them. The present war shows that it is the supreme duty of civilization to create conditions which will make peace permanent. Our country must be able and willing to take its part in that work. Peace which we desire for our country is not the peace of submission and cowardice, but the peace of justice.

War and its evils will not be done away with by suffering injustice to ourselves or others, or by pledging ourselves to drastic action for international rights if we do not prepare the force which would sustain such action.

We can perform our rightful part in promoting permanent international peace only by willingness and a preparedness to defend our own rights and the rights of other nations.

We earnestly desire to keep the peace. But there are higher things that we must keep, as Washington and Lincoln kept them for us.

MUST BE READY.

Adequate provision for common defence has become the task of foremost national concern. We must be ready in spirit, arms and industry.

Preparation in arms requires:

The navy once more second in battle efficiency.

A regular army of 250,000 men, fully armed and trained as a first line of land defence.

A system of military training adequate to organize a system with promptness, behind that first line of the army and navy, a citizen soldiery, supplied and controlled by the national government.

In our democracy every male citizen is charged with the duty of defending his country. This duty is not new. It has existed from the foundation of the government. Under modern conditions it cannot be performed without military training.

We should therefore give to every citizen opportunity for sufficient training at federal expense to perform this duty effectively.

We stand for peace, not war. We believe in preparedness for defence, but not for aggression. We should not sacrifice the lives of men for the glory or gain of a military conquest.

We desire that the women of the country who bear and rear its soldiers and make and keep its homes shall have the full political right of suffrage.

REAFFIRM 1912 ISSUES.

Arms alone cannot maintain a nation. Of far greater permanent importance must stand a national industry efficient for the general welfare, a prosperity justly distributed, the national life organized in all points for national ends.

Four years ago this party was born of a nation's awakened sense of these fundamental truths. In the platform then adopted we set forth our position on public questions. We here reaffirm the declaration then made on national issues.

A nation to survive must stand for the principles of social and industrial justice. We have no right to expect continued loyalty from an oppressed class. We must remove the artificial causes of high cost of living; prevent the exploitation of children in industry, protect the wage-earner; and by a properly regulated system of rural credits encourage the farmer and give to the landless man opportunity to acquire land.

A country must be worth living in to be worth fighting for.

Beneath a structure of military and economic strength, must be the spirit of the people, a deep loyalty and undivided allegiance to America, the land which has welcomed us and our immigrant forefathers. If that foundation ceases to endure we shall no longer be a nation.

ACTION NEEDED.

We have set forth in this platform plain essentials of national existence. They are not now in principle. Most men agree with them. Any man may propose them.

The urgent and immediate need is for their permanance. We have had ample experience with the promiser, with words and a bitter taste of words retracted. We must chose a man who not alone by words, but by past deeds gives guaranty that he can and will make these good.

The issue is one of men. In the midst of world changes unparalleled in history we cannot forecast the problems which will confront our government during the war and at its end. We, therefore, need as President a leader who knows the nation, a man who acts.

If we continue longer to stand for words as above deeds, for fancy as above facts we shall merit the fate that awaits the man or the people who do not face the truth.

We will meet and work with any party that sees the nation's need and puts forth a leader fit to meet it. We will accept no less in plan, or in the man and we hereby solemnly charge upon those who place party and politics above country and responsibility for a nation's failure sacrificed to self-interest and spoils

CHARGES OF ATTEMPT TO BUY VOTES ADD TO WOES OF WEEKS

By JOHN T. LAMBERT,

Political Editor, Boston American.

Chicago, June 8.—John W. Weeks is not without new troubles. Word has officially reached the Weeks' headquarters that the Senator will not receive the twenty-four votes he expected on the first ballot from the Missouri delegation.

During a caucus of the Missouri members, David W. Peters, a member of the delegation, is reported to have said, "I would be afraid to go back home if I voted for Weeks, for fear they would think I sold out."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat published a story of the caucus, set off with an eight-column head, "Candidate Weeks' talk at Chicago." B. B. Huff, the correspondent for the St. Louis paper, started his story as follows:

> The fact that Weeks money is being used in an effort to control the Missouri delegation stood out most prominently today in a caucus of the Missouri delegation.

Coming as the climax of many disheartening blows, the St. Louis story added further damage to the Weeks candidacy. A hurried conference of the Weeks campaign managers was called. The conferees were in session early this morning.

BLAME BAY STATE MEN.

Louis A. Coolidge of the United Shoe Machinery Company flitted in and flitted out of the conference room. Senator Weeks and his managers declined to comment upon the alleged effort to "control" the Missouri delegation. An official statement would "dignify" the report, the Weeks people said. They unofficially denied it.

Chairman Edward A. Thurston of the Republican State Committee, who is identified with the Weeks movement, said today that the "scandal talk" has reached his ears.

"But it all came directly or indirectly from the fellows who came out with the Massachusetts delegation," said Thurston, in a tone intended to disparage the reports.

Seven of the Massachusetts delegates have threatened to vote for Justice Hughes on the first ballot. If they do, that will be the most cruel blow of all, from the Weeks viewpoint.

Former Congressman Butler Ames will confer with Louis A. Frothingham and Charles S. Baxter today as to the advisability of issuing a joint statement condemnatory of the "Favorite Son" issue by which Weeks hopes to win the support of an united delegation.

Mr. Ames charges the Weeks managers with a violation of the agreement made by them when the unpledged ticket was placed in the field. He also declares that by voting for Weeks on the "Favorite Son" issue the delegates would betray the confidence of the voters who elected them.

At the close of an early conference by the unpledged ticket campaign managers, Mr. Ames had been given to understand that the Weeks people would at once terminate their campaign of "intimidation." He had decided to withhold the public statement. Since that time he is said to have learned that the Weeks methods were still in vogue.

C. Sinclair Weeks, the twenty-one-year-old son of the Senator, seems to be the only one interested in the campaign who still believes that his father has a chance.

"You don't know the developments," the young man said today. "If you did, you would believe that we were going to win."

Young Mr. Weeks is attending his first convention.

As the young man gazed out upon the riotous crowd and he heard the crash of the bands and the shouts that came from the throats of novitiate delegates or paid boosters, he said:

> What a waste of time, money and energy. While they stand out there exhausting themselves, the wires that will make them dance are being pulled and yanked in some quiet room in the hotel. How little they know about it.
> He showed some resentment against the Hughes movement. "It was launched some months ago," he said, "and the newspapers have been linked up in a campaign for him all that time."

He shows signs of political sagacity. "This is not a time for noise," he said. "This is a time to get delegates. Here is a room full of people. My father doesn't want to see them. He wants to see the delegates."

Delegates Fred P. Greenwod of Everett, C. Chester Eaton of Brockton, Colonel Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, and Alvan T. Fuller of Malden, who are pledged to support Roosevelt, conferred with Mr. Baxter and later attended a joint convention of all the Roosevelt delegates.

With the exception of Mr. Fuller, the delegates have decided to swing from Roosevelt to Hughes if the colonel is found to have no chance. Mr. Fuller will act according to his judgment as the emergency arises.

AWAIT McCALL ANXIOUSLY.

Upon the arrival of Governor McCall today, an effort will be made to bring order out of the present chaos in the Massachusetts delegation. Since Louis A. Coolidge threatened to drive Messrs. Crane, Lodge and McCall out of politics, the delegation has been split in twain. They are waiting for the Governor's counsel.

Eugene Noble Foss has had his say on the matter of prohibition and today he is evidently quite satisfied.

He stood before the resolutions committee of the Republican National Convention and declared with a sincerity that impressed his audience that John Barleycorn has tied a ball and chain on the leg of America and had stayed the Nation's progress while he sapped the Nation's vitality.

Henry Cabot Lodge glared at Mr. Foss from the opposite end of the table. A look of discomfiture clouded his face when his old political enemy asserted that the Massachusetts G. O. P. is bottled up in the hip pocket of the liquor interests.

Hughes Doesn't Even Seem to Be Interested.

By International News Service.

Washington, June 8.—From all outward appearances, the man least interested in the political fortunes of Justice Charles E. Hughes, of the United States Supreme Court, is the Justice himself. There was no more quiet spot in Washington than No. 2100 Sixteenth street, his home.

Most of the day, Justice Hughes sat in his spacious library, writing Supreme Court opinions. His daily routine has not been disturbed by the fact that he may be nominated by the Chicago convention. The only change noticeable is that formerly he frequently answered his telephone in person. Now another member of the family or his secretary, Lawrence H. Green, attends to all telephone calls.

> Short walk before breakfast.
>
> Work until luncheon.
>
>
> Dinner.
>
> One half hour playing pianola.
>
> Returns to work at 8.
>

Usually Justice Hughes knows by June where he will spend his Summer vacation and when. The Justice has not decided where he will go this year, nor when.

Justice Hughes' secretary has been kept busy for the past three days denying reports that Justice Hughes had issued a statement, that he had long distance conversations with Chicago, and that he contemplated making a statement. The Secretary declared the Justice would have nothing to say.

John Dough raised on Fleischmann's Yeast

"Now, General Gage, Look Out For Your Nose!"

This was the headline in the Boston newspapers in '76 when sixty out of one hundred sharpshooters hit the picture of a man's nose from a great distance off.

It required strong, steady nerves and a clear eye to make that shot—strength and health such as are common to those who

LAY KITCHENER DEATH TO SINN FEINERS

London, June 8.—Scotland Yard lays the sinking of the Hampshire and the death of Earl Kitchener to "the Sinn Fein movement."

This announcement, coming when all England was literally wrought up to a fever heat of spy-madness, caused a sensation, particuarly in official circles.

The Scotland Yard theory is that the sinking of the cruiser with the War Secretary's staff was a reprisal by "Sinn Feiners" for English acts in connection with the Irish revolution.

The fear that there will be other reprisals has set up a pronounced under-current of anxiety in Downing street, which for two days has been in a flurry of excitement unprecedented since the war began.

SCOUT SPY PLOT RUMORS.

The Scotland Yard people say they believe they are on the right trail. They simply use, when asked what that trail is, the two words: "Sinn Fein." But they profess to see underneath the words a world of meaning and possibilities.

Scotland Yard scoffs at the idea of any German agents being left at large anywhere on the British Isle. They insist no German spies had a hand in plotting the death of Kitchener, but that other hands did this; and they use agin the words, "Sinn Fein."

While there is talk of anti-German riots and of mobbing people of Teutonic name, or of even the most distant German relationship, the Scotland Yard conviction is accepted by many as well-grounded.

SPECIFY REASONS.

These persons point out the following as reasons why the theory is not as far-fetched as may seem at first thought:

1—British treatment of the revolutionist leaders who were declared to have been executed despite the promise of an officer that their lives would be spared.

2—The shooting of Connolly, one of the leaders, who was propped up in bed to face the firing squad, it was reported at the time.

3—The shooting without trial and before martial law went into effect in Dublin of three journalists by British officers.

4—The charge that fifty prisoners were stood up and summarily shot without a trial.

5—Other charges that boys and girls were shot down by British troops and that women suffered.

6—The charge that the revolutionists, fighting in uniform for their country, were treated as spies and not as prisoners of war by England, in violation of international law.

EXPECT A SENSATION.

Scotland Yard is centering its entire activities upon its theory, scenting a plot which will startle the nation when the facts are uncovered.

Lloyd-George Saved by Irish Situation.

By International News Service.

London, June 8.—But for the fateful circumstances that his duties as pacificator of Ireland kept him at home, David Lloyd-George, foremost of British statesmen, would have lost his life along with Lord Kitchener on the cruiser Hampshire.

It had been decided, says the Express, that Mr. Lloyd-George would accompany the war secretary to Russia to discuss the question of munitions for the Russian army, but the duties of mediating the political troubles in Ireland were so pressing that it was later decided by the government to keep Mr. Lloyd-George at home and send Leslie Robertson of the Ministry of Munitions instead.

MEMORIAL JUNE 13.

It has been decided that the memorial service for Lord Kitchener shall be held in St. Paul's on June 13. Both King George and Queen Mary will attend.

Influential newspapers have already begun campaigns in favor of various prominent men as successors to Lord Kitchener.

The Graphic is urging the appointment of Lord Derby. The Morning Post favors Lord Milner. The Times is working for the appointment of Mr. Lloyd-George.

A news agency declares that the post has been offered to Viscount John French, former commander-in-chief of the British forces in France and now commander of the home army.

The Daily Chronicle says that the name of Winston Churchill, former First Lord of the Admiralty, has been discussed in an informal way by the members of the Cabinet.

BODY NOT RECOVERED.

Despite the vigorous search the body of Lord Kitchener has not yet been recovered.

The weather off the northern coast of Scotland is normally stormy and the tides off the Orkney Islands are strong and variable. In view of these circumstances it is feared that the body may never be found.

A Reuter dispatch from Simla, India, says:

"The news of Kitchener's death was received here with universal regret. All of India mourns the loss."

Think British Mine Sank Kitchener Ship

New York, June 8.—Some officers of Norwegian and Danish steamships, who are now in port and are accustomed to navigating the waters about the Orkney Islands, intimated that the British cruiser Hampshire, carrying Earl Kitchener, was probably destroyed by one of the British mines planted to prevent German ships getting into Scapa Flow.

Officers of the Scandinavian steamers did not credit the cabled reports from London that the blowing up of the Hampshire was caused by German spies getting word to Germany that Lord Kitchener and his staff were on board the cruiser.

It would have been impossible, they say, to have sent word to Kiel and got instructions forwarded to a submarine in time to catch the Hampshire as she passed the Orkneys.

Moreover, the officers pointed out, the sea was so rough at the time of the disaster that lifeboats could not live, and a submarine would have wallowed so heavily that it would have been impossible to fire a torpedo with any accuracy.

Surprise is expressed generally among naval reserve officers of neutral and allied nations that the Hampshire was not escorted through the mine zone by a torpedo-boat destroyer or patrol boat.

Death of Kitchener Formidable Blow

The Hague, June 8.—All the Dutch papers dwell on the death of Earl Kitchener. The Nieuwe Courant sees in Kitchener's death the most formidable blow England has received in this war.

"One of the pillars of the empire has been shattered," it says.

Greatest Briton Since Wellington, Say Teutons

By International News Service.

Amsterdam, June 8. — Of Earl Kitchener, the Cologne Gazette says:

> Kitchener, the most distinguished English officers since Wellington, was never a field commander on a grand scale, but was a calculator with a dispassionate head and without flights of genius. He was a typical Englishman in his endowments and still more so in his reserved character.

The Koelnische Volks Zeitung says:

Italians Dismayed at Kitchener's Death

Rome, June 8.—The news of the death of Field Marshal Kitchener caused a feeling of dismay among the Italian public.

The King and General Cadorna, commander-in-chief of the Italian army, sent telegrams of condolence to King George. The Pope instructed Archbishop Bourne of Westminster to convey his sympathy to the British monarch.

Kitchener's Death a Calamity in Russia

Petrograd, June 8.—Field Marshal Earl Kitchener's death has profoundly affected all Russia. His proposed visit to Russia had been looked forward to with intense interest, not only by officials but by the people generally, as evidence of the further cementing of the growing cordiality between Great Britain and Russia.

Russia's remoteness from her allies has prevented that close co-operation which exists between France and Great Britain, and Earl Kitchener's visit was expected to unify Russia's efforts with the other nations with which her lot is cast. For this reason the loss of the British War Secretary has come to Russia as a national calamity.

GERMANS RESCUE BRITISH SEAMEN

Berlin, June 8.—After the North Sea battle, the German naval forces rescued from the battle cruiser Queen Mary one ensign and one man; from the battle cruiser Indefatigable, two men; from the torpedo boat destroyer Tipperary, seven men, including two wounded; from the destroyer Nestor, two officers, two deck officers and 75 men, including six wounded; from the destroyer Nomad, four officers and 68 men, including one officer and 10 men wounded, and from the destroyer Turbulent, 14 men, all of them wounded.

These men were saved by our small cruisers and torpedo boats.

CANADIAN OFFICERS MOURN KITCHENER

Ottawa, Ont., June 8.—All officers of the Canadian forces are wearing mourning, and all flags in militia buildings throughout the Dominion will be at half-mast for one week, in memory of Earl Kitchener.

An order to that effect was promulgated to the troops from militia headquarters, in accordance with the King's command.

TURKS NEAR BAGDAD DEFEAT RUSSIANS

London, June 8.—A defeat for the Russians attempting to advance on Bagdad is reported by the Turkish War Office.

FRENCH ADMIT GERMANS TOOK FORT VAUX

London, June 8.—The capture by the Germans of Fort Vaux, a key position of the French northeast of Verdun, five miles from the city of Verdun, was officially admitted today by the French War Office.

The fort had been demolished by heavy shell fire before it was given up, the communique says.

MADE GALLANT DEFENCE.

Gallant French soldiers under Major Raynal made a brave defence of the blasted works for seven days, during which time the Germans attacked night and day, hurling wave after wave of troops against the fort and shelling it with unprecedented violence in the lull between infantry assaults.

On Tuesday night the Germans gained a foothold in the fort and all through the balance of the night and all day Wednesday the battle raged with the men at hand to hand grips. It was a bloody combat in trenches and caves and underground passageways where the soldiers grappled like wild beasts.

In the meantime the big German guns were pouring their salvos of drum fire against the French rear and hurling a curtain of shells across the communication ways to prevent reinforcements from reaching Major Raynal.

FORCED TO SURRENDER.

Finally on Wednesday the French, completely cut off, had to surrender.

The garrison had fought gallantly and it is believed almost all of them were killed.

German attacks were made against the French positions east and west of the fort all night, but despite their ferocity all were repulsed.

Fort Vaux was known as the doorway to Verdun on the northeast. It lies on a high bluff.

This is the second of the forts defending Verdun to be captured by the Crown Prince. The first was Fort Douaumont, which, like Fort Vaux, is on the eastern side of the Meuse. Fort Vaux, unlike the oldtime fortresses, was a series of earthworks with hidden batteries.

The capture of Fort Vaux cost the Germans enormous losses. The ravines around the work are full of corpses.

The text of the French official communique follows:

SECOND LINE SHELLED.

"In the Argonne the Germans exploded mines at Hill 285 and Haute Chevauchee without causing any damage. We occupied the craters.

"On the left bank of the Meuse there was an intermittent bombardment of our second line.

"On the right bank there was intense artillery fighting in the region of Thiaumont and Douaumont. After seven days of continuous bloody fighting the garrison at Fort Vaux reached the limit of its endurance and could not prevent the enemy from occupying the works, which were wrecked by the bombardment.

"We maintain the surroundings of the fort as well as the trenches to the right and left, and before which all the attacks made by the enemy have been checked by our fire.

"The night was relatively calm on the rest of the front, except at Hartmansweiler Kopf, where the artillery combat continues very active."

BRAKEMAN LOSES RACE WITH DEATH

Charles Jackson, fifty years old, of No. 13 Highland avenue, Somerville, lost out in a race against death early today, after being crushed between two freight cars in the Rutherford avenue yards of the Boston & Maine Railroad. Jackson, who was a brakeman, was placed aboard a train and rushed to the North Station, where an ambulance was waiting to take him to the Massachusetts General Hospital. He died on the way.

LAWRENCE ITALIANS DRIVEN OUT BY FIRE

Lawrence, June 8.—The Italian colony was thrown into panic by a fire that destroyed the Vincengerra macaroni factory and several tenements in the building, Nos. 105-103 Common street, and the three-story Kress carriage repair shops adjoining.

U. S. CONSULATE MOBBED BY MEXICANS

By International News Service.

Chihuahua, June 8.—A mob of several thousand persons attacked the American consulate, tore down the official consulate shield over the door and shattered all the windows.

General Lopez rushed a detachment of troops to the consulate and drove the infuriated mob away from the building.

The crowd then swarmed toward the foreign club. All sorts of missiles were hurled through the windows. The doors were broken down and unsuccessful attempts made to burn down the building.

A score of engineers, including several Americans, who had taken refuge in the Foreign Club, escaped by making their way over the roofs. They were pursued by mobs and their homes stoned.

The city has been placed under martial law.

Trevino told an immense gathering in the opera house that unless the American government immediately withdrew its soldiers from Mexico, the Mexican government would call all Mexicans to arms.

RUSSIANS GAIN FROM 3 TO 10 MILES

By International News Service.

Petrograd, June 8.—Victorious Russian offensive between the Pripet marshes and the Rumanian frontier, which has already pressed the Austro-Hungarians back from three to ten miles, resulting in the capture of more than 40,000 Austro-Hungarian prisoners and nearly 100 guns, is being directed by Czar Nicholas.

DRIVE ON CZERNOWITZ.

In Volhynia the Austro-Hungarians have been pressed back beyond Lusk.

It is believed here that German troops will be rushed to reinforce the Austrians, although it is doubtful if Field Marshal von Hindenberg will be sent into Galicia, because the situation at the northern end of the battle front is too critical.

MESSAGE OF CZAR.

The Czar has sent the following message to General Brussiloff:

> Transmit to my well beloved troops on the front under your command the news that I am following with satisfaction their brave deeds and that I appreciate their bravery. Express to them my gratitude.
>
> May the good God assist us in driving our enemies from our territories. I am convinced that all will hold firmly together and fight until the glorious end for Russian arms.
>

The secret of where the Russian gains took place is thus dealt with in the official statement:

> Prudence does not permit us at present to divulge the names of the valiant battalions, which fought some time with the loss of all their officers.
>
> It is equally impossible to publish the names of the brave general officers killed or wounded, or the localities where the combats occurred.

CARSON "SANGUINE" ON IRISH QUESTION

London, June 8.—Sir Edward Carson told the Imperial Council of Commerce that he had privately conferred at Belfast with a committee of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, relative to the proposal for the settlement of the Home Rule question.

He stated that while he was sanguine of the results, nothing could be announced definitely as yet.

WAR SUMMARY

Paris officially announced today that the Germans have captured Fort Vaux.

The fall of the fort was inevitable, as it had been surrounded on three sides, and the German guns were literally chewing it to pieces.

The fall of Vaux brings the Germans another step nearer Verdun. Paris has called Vaux a "key fort"; but in modern warfare there are no key positions. Ground must be won, trench by trench.

The Russians raise the total of prisoners taken by them to 41,000. The Austrian dispatch dealing with the same operations says the Austrians withdrew from some positions, and puts the Russian losses at 50,000.

Taking both reports into consideration, and salting each with what we know of the reliability of Petrograd and Vienna official statements the probabilities may be stated thus:

The Russians, with an attack on a large scale against the thinly held Teuton lines, have gained successes at many points, driving the Austrians and Germans back from three to ten miles.

The Austrians would not estimate the Russian losses at less than their own. They would surely estimate the Russian losses as considerably greater than their own. That is human nature. Therefore when the Austrians estimate the Russian loss at 50,000, a good guess for working purposes would be that the Austrian losses have been twenty-five to thirty thousand.

There is a touch of humor in the Russian official. "Prudence," it says, "does not permit us to divulge the names of the valiant battalions. . . . the names of the brave officers . . . or the localities where the combats occurred."

Apparently, then, Petrograd does not care to say where they whipped the Austrians for fear the Austrians might find it out.

U. S. Refusal to Quit Surprises Mexico City

By International News Service.

Mexico City June 8.—Ambassador-Designate Arredondo at Washington has cabled Carranza that President Wilson will not reply to Carranza's demand for the withdrawal of United States troops.

Report Americans in Chihuahua Missing.

By International News Service.

Washington, June 8.—Confidential official dispatches to the State Department today said that all Americans, at the time the message was sent, were fleeing from Chihuahua City as a result of the Mexican uprising there last night in which the American consulate was stoned.

Some of the Americans were said to be missing and it was impossible to tell whether they had been killed or had secretly left the city.

American affairs are being handled in Chihuahua City by the British consul during the absence of Consul Letcher, who came to Washington recently for a conference with officials.

HOLD UP DECISION IN SKEFFINGTON CASE

Dublin, June 8.—The court-martial of Captain Bowen-Colthurst, who is accused of manslaughter for having caused the execution during the recent rebellion of F. Sheehy Skeffington, editor of the Irish Citizen, Thomas Dickson and Fred McIntyre, physicians who had examined the defendant testified he was mentally unstable.

The court proceedings in the case were closed. Decision was reserved.

ROOKIES MAKE FITZGERALD "CAMP BABY"

The AMERICAN has sent Willard H. Davis to the citizens' camp at Plattsburg to tell how Boston and other New England citizens are training to help defend this nation efficiently in case of war. The preparedness parades throughout the country have shown that the nation is aroused at last to the necessity of being prepared. It is today the one big important issue in the nation. Mr. Davis will tell from day to day how the citizens are working to learn how to defend the nation and to lead others in its defence.

By WILLARD H. DAVIS.
Staff Correspondent Boston American.

Plattsburg, June 8.—John F. Fitzgerald, Jr., son of ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, captain-elect of next year's baseball team of the Huntington School has been voted "Camp Baby" as a result of his "tender" eighteen years.

This title was bestowed upon "Jawn" after a careful investigation had been made of the ages of fourteen hundred men attending the Plattsburg camp.

John's "tender years," however, are the only tender things about him. His fondness for athletics has kept him in the pink of condition. The three days' training he has received here has eliminated any "softness," and although he is the "baby" the name signifies nothing in that respect, except a lot of jollying.

To see him handle the heavy rifle, go through the manual of arms, and swing into line with the "vets" and "rookies," over many of whom he towers in height, would eliminate him from the "baby" class.

Both John and his brother Tom have selected the engineering course while they are in camp. This means hard work in the field, much detail, and is considered one of the hardest courses at the camp. Both of the boys have proven good mixers in their company street, and are making friends every day.

Yesterday was the busiest day yet for the Boston "four hundred." In speaking of the phrase "four hundred" a word of explanation might be wise if an explanation can be made.

When the Boston contingent arrived it was heralded about that Boston's "four hundred" were in camp. Whether it meant numbers or whether it was merely a cognomen, attached to the crowd, could not be gathered. Since their arrival it has been learned that the actual Boston men in camp number about 260.

The "four hundred" it seems, refers to the numerous Back Bay clubmen who are with the Boston party. To see them wallowing around in the mud, digging ditches, deprived of each and every luxury they have been accustomed to, and without a murmer, too, one would never surmise their social standing and wealth.

START INQUEST TO FIND GIRL'S MURDERER

boy, and Mrs. Bella Talbot, who claim the girl's body was found an hour before her disappearance was reported to the Melrose police, were also among the witnesses summoned. Others were Mrs. John H. Higgins, mother of the Higgins boy; Frank W. Hamilton, who voluntarily helped the police in hunting clews; Miss Hazel Hosely and Ruth Gaynor, hill neighbors; Miss Martha Foster, who sent the child home for her primer on June 1, the day she was murdered; Mrs. Fannie Laskey, who is reported to have seen two boys fleeing past her house; Mrs. George Grover; employes at Towner's ice house, where Joseph Wakelin telephoned the police that his daughter was missing; Chief of Police George E. Kerr, Captain Eaton, Patrolmen Doherty, Pierce, Penio, State Officers Silas P. Smith and Thomas W. Eustace and others.

GUARD NEW EVIDENCE.

The proceedings began at 3 o'clock. Witnesses were examined separately. The State officers denied that Harold Shaw and Harold Mead, the two boy suspects held at East Cambridge Jail, would testify at the inquest, though members of their families are expected to.

The inquest furnished the first systematic interrogation of witnesses and was expected by the authorities to forge a chain of evidence that would implicate the guilty person. Many scant and puzzling phases were expected to be made clearer.

For eight days now the case has been a mystery, though much light has been shed upon it within the past few days. The officials were said to have new evidence which they were guarding.

Although now following a fixed line of inquiry, the authorities are reported to be confronted by annoying obstacles which make their task difficult. It is on that account that they solicit the aid of the public in presenting every scrap of information available. That also explains their eager[illegible] to locate the driver of the di[illegible]d automobile seen stalled for h[illegible] at the foot of Dexter road on th[illegible] of the murder.

SLAIN AT 9 O'CLOCK.

Miss Martha Foster, the murdered girl's school teacher said:

> Loretta had left her primer at home several days. I had warned her to bring it with her to school. When she came Thursday morning without it, I told her to hurry home and get it. I gave her this order as the class was assembling at 8:30. She did not cry when I told her, nor did I notice that she was crying when she started for home.

It appears that as the child hurried along she became frightened and cried. Two or three passers noticed that she was crying. It is figured, according to the evidence in hand, that she was dead by 9 o'clock or a little later.

Her body was found 100 feet in from the rocky, winding road leading to her home at the top of the hill. It was among the thick undergrowth on the slope of the hill, and her father, who claims to have found it after 2 p. m., says he was sure she had been killed somewhere else and carried there.

SEEK NEW MOTIVE.

The latest State theory was that the child was strangled and that its body was hacked to make it appear that the attack was the motive for the crime when, in the opinion of the police, it was not. Fresh footprints are reported to have been found by the police on a back trail and it is said that impressions were taken as evidence.

The victim's father telephoned to the police yesterday that he had a likely clew. Chief Kerr and Patrolmen Doherty and Fay hurried to the Wakelin house, three miles from police headquarters. They conferred first with the father and then with Mrs. Wakelin and later with the elder son, William, aged twenty-four.

Mr. Wakelin told the police about a former tenant in one of his houses whom he had ejected and thought the man ought to be looked up. He said this man tortured hens and furnished his name and address. Then the son told about passing a young woman at the foot of the hill on returning from his all-night work yesterday morning and of how she held her handkerchief up to the side of her face as she passed. The son thought this woman warranted inquiry, also.

QUESTION HIGGINS AGAIN.

Little Johnny Higgins was quizzed again yesterday and stuck steadfastly to his story that Mr. Wakelin told him on returning from school at 1 o'clock that day that "Tootsie" was dead, and asked him to tell his teacher next morning.

Johnny's mother explained that she scolded her son because he was a little late in reaching home for dinner as he had to hurry to St. Joseph's Church in Maplewood to attend confirmation instructions.

Mrs. Higgins said her son did not mention anything about "Tootie" Wakelin's death until he returned from church and heard his papa talking about the tragedy at supper. Then Johnny spoke up and said:

> When I was coming up the hill from school today Mr. Wakelin was in the garden. I asked him why "Tootie" had not come back with the book and he said: "Tootie" is dead and I wish you would tell your teacher tomorrow."

Mr. Wakelin denies the boy's version and says that while he was at work in the garden hoeing, Johnny came trudging along. He asked the boy why Tootie was not with him, he says, and on learning that she had not reached the school with her book, hastened there and learned from the teacher himself that the child had not returned to school.

PETERSON SAW WAKELIN.

He says he then started on the hunt which resulted in his finding the body in five minutes after he got back from the school.

Johnny Higgins left the Ripley School with the other pupils at 12:30. There was no afternoon session. The boy and mother figure that he was home shortly before 1 o'clock. The police did not learn that the Wakelin girl was missing until 1:58.

Edward Peterson, who lives in a lonely section known as "Swedeville" says he walked home with Harry Talbot, whose mother claims Mrs. Wakelin told her before one o'clock that "Tootie" was strangled.

MEXICO ASKS REPLY; U. S. GIVES NO HOPE

By International News Service.

Washington, June 7.—Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican Ambassador-Designate, called on Secretary of State Lansing and asked him when General Carranza might expect a reply to his demand that American troops be withdrawn from Mexico.

Almost immediately after the conference with the Mexican envoy Secretary Lansing stated that there were "no prospects of a reply to Carranza." Later is was learned that a lengthy cipher message was dispatched to J. L. Rogers, the State Department's special agent at Mexico City.

J. H. MacAlman, distributer of Stearns cars in this territory, is making a visit to the Stearns plant in Cleveland.

It is understood that some interesting announcements regarding the marketing of low-priced, high-grade roadster and touring cars are shortly to be made by one of the largest motor manufacturing concerns in the industry. This particular vehicle is built along well-defined lines, and will be what might be called a standardized car, although it is not the product of the company which made the term an important one in the motor industry.

Joseph W. Porter, who is well known in the local industry, has been made manager of the New York branch of the King Motors, Inc. Since his connection with the New York concern the business there has been increased materially.

Two concerns which will shortly place their product on the market, namely, the Jordan and Liberty Motor Companies of Cleveland and Detroit, respectively, are making great strides of advancement in the construction of their plants. The plans of both companies provide for the production of automobiles which will undoubtedly prove winners when they are finally placed on sale. This, it is believed, will not be much before the first of August.

MEXICAN SOLDIERS KILL U. S. DRIVER

Columbus, N. M., June 8.—An American motor truck driver, unidentified, was shot and killed by Mexican regular soldiers at Elvalle, the night of June 3. He had entered the town against orders. His body was found the following morning.

An investigation has been ordered.

as I am concerned there will be no trouble and that if there is, it will be because someone else has done it."

Orpet loved as madly as the girl. He avowed it in every letter. In April he wrote:

"Just got your letter and have lovesickness so bad that I can hardly stand it here. There is only one girl in the world that I want to kiss and that is you and only you." Some of these letters follow:

IF YOU DON'T WRITE YOU DON'T CARE FOR ME.

Madison, Wis.
May 4, 1915.

Dearest Marian: I was expecting to hear from you either this morning or this afternoon, but since you didn't write I am doing it for you. I am awfully disappointed in you, Marian, for I thought you cared quite a little for me.

That night I was up to see you though I found out different and I sure am disappointed. However, I haven't given up hopes and am going to try to bring you around to it after a while. You know you want to do it so why not. No reason at all for not doing it, and if you care as you said you do, why not come across.

You may remember you promised me some pictures. I forgot to ask you for them when I left, so will you please send them up to me. Am sorry that I can't give you any of me, but as they are all home I have to wait until June. Will that be all right?

I wish I could have seen more of you, dearest. I think that if we had seen more of each other you wouldn't be so cold and indifferent to me and that is what I am hoping you will do in the next month.

You must, if as you say and as you know, I care for you once more.

Anyway, the next time I see you I'll show you what it's like.

Do you realize that we have got five more weeks of school after this week? After that, I shall be able to see you again and to put my arms around you and kiss you, which is the one thing I would like to do next to one thing, and that will come after the rest.

I haven't much time left as I have to make up a day and a half I lost. Write as soon as you can, and make up for lost time, for when you don't write I think you don't care for me and that isn't so far from truth, I suppose?

Also be good, very good, for me, for you are all mine, aren't you?

Your loving, BILLY.

ONLY ONE GIRL I WANT TO KISS.

April 18, 1915.

Dearest Marian—Just got your letter, and have got lovesickness so badly I can hardly stand it here. Every letter I get from you makes me worse, and the Lord knows where it will end up.

You said that the Honorable Miss Double said she would like to see me kiss her. What does she mean? I am afraid I've got myself in bad, for I certainly don't want to kiss her. There is only one girl in the world I want to kiss, and that is YOU, only you and none but you.

I wish I could have been there on Thursday night when you left me, hearing that you were all alone. I think if I was there you wouldn't have been so lonesome, and, Marian, the next time I am home and you are lonesome, just let me know and I will come up and try to take the place of your family. Will you do it? I think we could make things rather lively, couldn't we?

Write to me as soon as you can. It will be a terribly long wait anyway so don't drag it out.

With all the love I am capable of ——,

BILLY.

GOOD NIGHT, MARIAN, AND ABOVE ALL, BE GOOD.

Madison, Wis.
December 3, 1915.

Dear Marian:

I am sorry I haven't been able to write before, but ever since I got back I have been trying to catch up with back work, and it is not over with yet, either.

I hope you got that stuff all right, sent it Monday and let me know how it comes out. This will have to be only a short one this time, as it is pretty late now.

I hope everything is going all right with you, down there, and of course it is. I will be home about the 20th, and will make up for lost time—that is if you wish to.

BILL.

LET ME KNOW HOW THINGS GO. BURN THIS.

Madison, Dec. 7, 1915, 6 p. m.

Dear Marion:

Your letter came this morning, and was surprised to see that there is nothing doing yet.

Put off going to the doctor as long as possible. Do not tell him I gave you something to take, will you?

I am absolutely certain that as far as I am concerned there will be no trouble, and that if there is, it will be because some one else has done it.

Let me know how things go, and burn this.

I HOPE YOU WILL SOON BE UP AND AROUND.

Saturday a. m.

Dear Marian:

Jo has told me that you have been pretty sick. Just got word yesterday, hence the delay.

I hope that everything is all right now, and that you will soon be up and around.

I will try to get down to see you probably the ninth of February, and will call you up the evening of the eighth. Remember the dates. It will be under the same conditions as last time, remember?

If everything is not all right by the time I see you, it will be then; leave it to me. What has happened since I saw you is encouraging, although you may not know it. I will explain when I see you.

Above all, keep quiet, and all will be all right. If you start going around too soon you may have a relapse or something.

I do not like to write any more, you know why, I guess, but remember what I told you.

Also do not tell anyone about it, for I am not supposed to be home then. Remember.

Sincerely,

BILL.

DO NOT WORK TOO HARD, BUT GET THROUGH.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 9, 1916.

Dear Marian:

I have not heard from you in a long time, but nevertheless I am taking a chance this time. I have just got through taking exams today, but do not know yet whether or not I passed in all of them. This is a minor consideration.

I suppose you have had your finals or are having them now. Good luck to you, anyway.

I hope everything is going all right with you down there at Deerfield, including that basketball team of yours. We have a pretty good one up here this year, and expect to clean up, although it is rather soon to predict.

This won't be much of a letter I'm afraid, for it is rather late, and I have got some more work to do yet tonight. There is no compulsion about answering this letter, in fact I do not expect to get a reply, although you never can tell.

Do not work too hard, but get through in everything, for your own sake. Sincerely,

BILL.

New Mystery Woman Enters Orpet Case

By RICHARD LEE.

Staff Correspondent Boston American.

Waukegan, Ill., June 8.—With completion of a jury and the start of William Orpet's trial on a charge of murdering his discarded sweetheart, Marion Lambert, still another woman—strikingly beautiful, unknown to all—has swept majestically into the case.

Gowned to a queen's taste, black from head to foot, she fairly took the Waukegan courtroom, judge, lawyers and all, off their feet. Their awe turned to amazement when she calmly seated herself at the defendant's elbows, in between the father and mother.

And there she sat watching Orpet and the proceedings intently, but never getting a nod of recognition from one of the Orpets. Orpet appeared to gaze apprehensively in her direction occasionally, but if he knew her he did not show it.

ORPET DIDN'T KNOW HER.

Mrs. Orpet once turned to her son with an inquiry regarding the identity of the mysterious stranger. His attorneys likewise became curious regarding the fair stranger, but the boy persisted that he had never seen her before.

Nevertheless the woman in black remained. And she evidently plans to remain as it was learned that she applied at one of Waukegan's hotels for the most expensive suite. She announced that she would hold it as long as the Orpet trial lasted.

There it appeared that she was known as Mrs. W. A. Shaw, a widow, and that she came here from the North Shore Hotel in Chicago. In Chicago she was known chiefly as a rich widow who was before her marriage Jule Mendez, native of Madrid, Spain.

"There is a very good reason for my interest in the Orpet case as will be known in the course of time," Mrs. Shaw stated to interviewers, "and I might add that I do not think there is a shadow of a chance of this boy being convicted. He has suffered too much already."

WILKERSON ILL.

After the completed jury had been sworn in and court had adjourned until morning on account of the sudden illness of James H. Wilkerson, formerly United States District Attorney, who is acting for the defence, the woman held her seat until bailiffs hed led Orpet away to his cell.

The mother of the defendant arose with a disdainful look toward the interloper and left the courtroom without a word. After court, counsel for both sides held a whispered conference in which the mysterious woman was evidently the subject.

Judge Donnelly interested himself in the matter. He caused an investigation to be made and the report made to him was that the woman was the mother of a son just Orpet's age, arousing her interest in the present case.

"She surely does not look to be the mother of a twenty-one-year-old boy," was the court's only comment.

"I'll be here again in the morning," was the woman's parting taunt to newspaper men striving to solve her mystery.

TWO UNMARRIED JURORS.

The twelve chosen veniremen, seven of them fathers of daughters of, or near the age of Marion Lambert, were sworn in as the jury, to try Orpet, early in the afternoon. David Joslin, assistant State's attorney, was preparing to start with denunciation of the defendant as an opening statement, when the defence attorney was taken ill.

H. F. King, clerk, married man, age twenty-four.

T. W. Willoughby, farmer, married man, with family, age thirty-two.

J. J. Brand, merchant, married man, two sons, age fifty-six.

E. J. Bock, grocer, married man, one son, age forty-two.

W. J. McNanley, plumber, married man, two children, age forty-eight.

BAR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Counsel for both sides agreed that the opening statements would be concluded before the conclusion of today's session of court. State's Attorney Dady announced he had decided to call Frank Lambert, father of the dead girl, as the first witness.

State's Attorney Dady was selected to deliver the opening statement for the prosecution to the jury. Taking of testimony is not expected to begin before Friday.

Judge Charles H. Donnelly, presiding, announced that during the trial, all girls under eighteen years of age would be barred from the courtroom. This rule also applies to all boys under twenty-one, and women with babies in their arms.

ITCHY RASH ON CHEST AND FACE

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I had a rash which began on my chest and face, later going to my shoulders and back. It was very itchy and I had to scratch it which made it burn like fire, and the skin was sore and inflamed. When my clothing would rub against it, it caused itching and burning which was very uncomfortable and I had no rest at night, for after going to bed I would go to sleep for a few moments only to be waked up again.

"I let the rash go for about a week when I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the first application they seemed to stop the burning and after I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and four cakes of Cuticura Soap I was healed." (Signed) Wm. C. Robertson, 85 Mountain Ave., Dorchester, Mass., Oct. 21, 1915.

HUGHES CANDIDACY ATTACKED IN HOUSE

Washington, June 8.—The fact that Justice Hughes has permitted his name to be used as a possible presidential nominee without protest was attacked in the House today by Representative Murray of Oklahoma. Mr. Murray quoted James Bryce, declaring that "when the judiciary of American becomes corrupt the nation is in its last stage of decadence."

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 200% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a well known Specialist, who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, said: If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.—Advertisement.

BIDS ON PAVING ATTACKED BY FIN. COM.

The Finance Commission in an official report issued today condemned the bids submitted for the paving of Morain street, the street on which the Mayor's new mansion is located, and also the bids submitted for paving four other streets in the neighborhood of the Mayor's house. The apparent low bidder for paving these streets was the Central Construction Company, of which Senator Timilty is president.

The commission made no finding in regard to the leasing of a part of the schoolhouse to a liquor concern, on the ground that the Mayor states he has already ordered the liquor firm to vacate.

The first report covers the bids submitted for the paving of Morain, Bardwell and Halifax streets and Dunster and Parkton roads. In effect the commission backs up the contention of Councillor Storrow that the bids requiring a three-inch thickness for topeka and a two-inch thickness for bitulithic are unfair and result in bidders of bitulithic having the advantage.

3.—Singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers" and "When Teddy Comes Marching Home" and then adjourning until tomorrow, when the big rocket is due to ascend.

GUM-SHOE EXPEDITION.

The gum-shoe expedition working for the ultimate triumph of the Oyster Bay leader started in last night with the explosion of a few mines in minor delegations. They reported to the waiting Moose that a few craters had been occupied and that prospects were good. The tangible evidences of success in forcibly dragging the Old Guard to the seat of repentance for 1912 were not very strong.

Indeed, the night brought evidence of more bitterness in some directions. Mayor Bill Thompson's city payroll, headed by a band that cost real money, invaded the Moose precincts, where a faithful crowd was trying to sing "Teddy's Bear" to the accompaniment of a mechanical organ, and drowned the barbershop quartet and the faithful chorus of delegates. It was raining and the Moose were wet and in no mood to be trifled with by any mere favorite son.

Since the invasion was made in the name of Sherman and ostensibly for his boom, the Moose sharpened their horns and rushed across the street to the Congress Hotel and broke into a Sherman seance just by way of reprisal.

A Texas statesman of the Moose camp slugged a Chicago city employe, bringing the first claret of the big con test. The Moose yelled and there was a starting point for some more harmony talk based upon the idea that if one really wants peace one must fight.

"T. R. BY FRIDAY."

It is well to keep this incident in mind. Tag it as the views of the rank and file which is here for the express purpose of doing the voting on the question of nominating Roosevelt.

While the leaders, headed by George W. Perkins, William White, Victor Murdock and Governor Johnson, held out the olive branch the average Moose delegate hunted a brick.

Perkins et al, aided and abetted by whatever occult force George B. Cortelyou brought along, kept telling the lesser lights that the Old Guard was in extremis and that all the machine now required was the services of a good, conscientious confessor, inured by long practice to hearing untoward revelations of mis-spent lives.

In a nutshell the Moose declared the big stick had been swung over the Old Guard, that it must now either take the Colonel or take chances of running a more or less favored son against two other candidates and that the nomination of the Colonel probably Friday is a foregone conclusion for the Progressives.

In this connection the solemn pledge of Raymond Robins was recalled as being important. James R. Garfield had moved to adjourn. Scenting a scheme to delay the nomination a hundred delegates were instantly on their feet and shouting "No."

"I pledge you," said the chairman, "that nothing shall be done to prevent the regular and orderly doing of things for which you plead."

What's a Whizz? Young Roosevelt Knows; HIS Word

Following closely in the footsteps of his illustrious father, whose propensity for labelling people and things is common knowledge, young Archie Roosevelt shows signs of rivalling T. R.

At Cambridge recently, young Archie, now a jovial junior at Harvard, was invited by a college chum to spend the evening at the home of a favorite aunt. With visions of home-made pie and prim colonial parlors in his mind's eye, Archie accepted the invitation.

Contrary to expectation, the chum's aunt proved anything but the precise New England spinster whom Archie had conjured up in his imagination when asked to pass the evening at his friend's house. After the formalities were over Miss Aunt proceeded to make young Archie feel very much "at home." Auntie kept the two young men in a continual uproar of hilarity during the evening.

As the two young men were about to leave, Archie, beaming all over with smiles, put out his hand to "Auntie" and said: "Miss Blank, you're a regular whizz! Thanks for the bully evening. I've had a 'spiffy' time!"

PREPAREDNESS IS HARDWARE WATCHWORD

Preparedness in trade supplies will be one of the many features at meetings of the National Retail Hardware Association Convention in Mechanics Building, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Preparedness night will be on Monday in the New American House, when the delegates will have a stag dinner with Will T. Hodges as chairman.

The New England Hardware Dealers' Association will unite with the National Association in making this a great business event for Boston.

D. Fletcher Barber of Boston, who was elected last year president of the national convention when it met in St. Paul, will preside at the gatherings. He is very anxious to enlist the interest of every person in the hardware industry.

In referring to the convention, he said today:

"We meet in convention after a most prosperous year. Business has been good and the demand for goods has been away ahead of the supply. In this type of prosperity we have much to learn about the conducting of our business interests in the future.

"This convention with its many delegates will bring into prominence the great interests involved in the hardware business and how its efficiency may be improved and what federal legislation is needed to protect as well as advance the wholesome interests of the trade.

"Never before has Boston had such an opportunity to get a close view of this important association in the trade of the United States. We want to make every day during the convention a red letter day and we want every hardware man to do his duty in this respect."

During the exhibition, which is to be the largest of its kind in history, there will be a number of side events.

The ladies' committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. H. M. Sanders, will hold many social events at the Hotel Lenox.

Copenhagen, June 8.—A general strike is in progress in Norway. Eighty thousand workers in various trades are out.

The government, fearing violence, has prohibited the sale or delivery of any alcoholic drinks.

ITALIANS DEFEAT AUSTRIAN TROOPS

London, June 8.—The Austrians again essayed violent attacks against the Italians in the upper Arsa valley and northeast of Asiago, but everywhere were repulsed.

In the latter sector the Italians drove back the Austrians in a hand-to-hand conflict to the bottom of the Campomulo valley.

SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

MARY S. COOLIDGE A BRIDE

MRS. EDWIN F. ATKINS, Jr.
Former Miss Mary Shepley Coolidge of Marlboro street.

The quiet home wedding yesterday of Miss Mary Shepley Coolidge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Coolidge, of Marlboro street, and Edwin F. Atkins, Jr., marks the bridal of another prominent Boston society girl. Miss Mabel Coolidge, a sister, was the bride's only attendant. Only close friends and relatives were present. Following a wedding trip, the couple will live in Belmont.

"Burntwood," the beautiful Dedham home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Harding, was opened this afternoon for a fete for the benefit of the Polish sufferers. The affair was under the auspices of the Dedham branch of the Surgical Dressings Committee, and an attractive program was presented.

Young society girls, in Polish dress, served tea and sold candies, cake and ices. There was a pantomime and dance by children and sylvan dancing by young girls. Auction bridge was played in a pavilion overlooking the splendid gardens.

Misses Elizabeth Burgess, Margaret Rice, Susan Rogers, Mabel Goodwin, Barbara Burgess, Margaret Wrenn, Charlotte Loring, Ruth Hodgdon, Harriett Brewster, Elizabeth Smith and Augusta and Marie Converse were among the society girls assisting.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian P. Codman are now established at their Summer home in Hamilton. Mr. and Mrs. Codman occupied, during the past Winter, the Ludlow Villa in Lenox.

◦ ◦ ◦

"Parramatta," the charming Summer home of the Lincoln Rea Peabodys, which was occupied by President Taft during the last two Summers of his administration, is now ready for Mr. and Mrs. Peabody. It is one of the most attractive places in Beverly.

◦ ◦ ◦

The marriage of Miss Ruth Nash, daughter of the late Professor Henry S. Nash and Mrs. Nash, of Cambridge, and the Rev. Alan Reid Chalmers, of New York, will take place June 26. The wedding had been planned for a year from this date, but because Miss Nash's fiance has received an appointment to the pastorate of an Episcopal parish in Wyoming the preparations have been hastened. Mr. Chalmers will be graduated from the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, this month. Miss Nash graduated from Vassar last year.

◦ ◦ ◦

The engagement is announced of Miss Gladys Kinney Brush, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Brush, of Brookline, to Joseph Stickney Kimball. Mr. Kimball is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Kimball of Newbury street. He is a 1912 Yale man. Mr. Brush and his family are now at their Summer home, "Shingleside," Swampscott.

◦ ◦ ◦

A. C. Lawrence of Commonwealth avenue and his daughter, Mrs. Marion Higgins, together with her family, will open their Marblehead residence tomorrow.

At the first week-end party Lawrence Higgins, Harvard '17, will entertain a number of classmates in celebration of his recent election as manager of the baseball team.

ALLSTON GIRL IS WED IN NEW YORK

Allston society circles were surprised this morning to learn that Miss Ida M. Tower, one of the most popular and attractive members of the younger set, had slipped quietly over to New York, where she was married yesterday in "The Little Church Around the Corner." The groom was F. Millette Leary, formerly of Brookline, but now located in New York. The young couple will make their home in that city. None but Mrs. Leary's most intimate friends knew of her intentions. Announcements were received in Allston today.

Fire in Red Bank, N. J.

Red Bank, N. J., June 8.—Fire destroyed Waters & Osborn's sash and blind factory and lumber shed here today. The loss is $75,000.

SAYS HIS WIFE MARRIED HIM ILLEGALLY

Plymouth, June 8.—Earl A. M. Sumner, proprietor of the Brant Rock Hotel, at Brant Rock, and Martha A. Sumner, the former forty-five, the latter thirty, figured here in a divorce suit involving odd features.

Mrs. Sumner sought a decree on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment. Mr. Sumner had filed a counter action asking that the marriage be declared void under the law of disability, in that the ceremony, performed in Portland, Me., May 12, 1915, was within the two years allowed by law when either party has secured a previous divorce.

Judge O'Connell has taken the case under advisement.

British Admit Loss of First Line at Hooge to Teutons

London, June 8.—The Germans have captured the British front line trenches at Hooge, on the northern end of the British line in France.

Hooge lies four miles to the southeast of Ypres, and about the same distance north of Hill 60, where heavy fighting has been in progress for a week.

It was in this neighborhood that the Canadians holding the front were forced back last week, and since have been fighting stubbornly to regain their lost ground.

AWARD $15,150 VERDICTS FOR AUTO CRASH

Verdicts totaling $15,150 were returned against Alden B. Speare by a Suffolk jury in the court of Judge King today as a result of an automobile crash in Commonwealth avenue, Newton, in 1914, in which Speare's machine and that of Ransom B. Fuller, the "steamship king," took part. Fuller was awarded $4,150 for damages to his machine, and three women occupants who were riding with him were also given damages by the jury.

There were five suits originally, Speare suing Fuller for damage to his machine and suits by Fuller and three other occupants of his car against Speare. The last four were allowed and Speare's suit dismissed.

Miss Ellen I. Anderson, an occupant of Fuller's car, was award $5,000; Mrs. Alice G. Lockett, $2,0 and her daughter, Miss Betty Locke was given $4,000 by the jury. were injured.

Food for Thought for Parents

Food for Health for Children

YOU are careful to see that the clothes your children wear are clean and comfortable. You are quick to note if their little feet are warm and dry. You are watchful that their sleeping room is well ventilated, and when they are hungry you are tenderly eager to soothe and satisfy the call of their appetite.

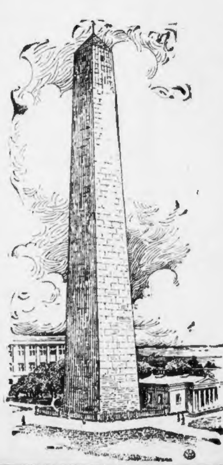
But are you particular that the food your children eat does more than merely satisfy hunger?

The bodies of active growing children are ever changing. Muscles are developing, stature is increasing, bones are growing and tissue is forming. And with all these natural functions of growth at work, it follows that they must have food which will not only satisfy hunger but also help nature in its work of transforming boy to man and girl to woman.

There is one food which will help you solve your children's food problem and that is WARD'S BREAD.

WARD'S BREAD is not only a palatable and hunger-satisfying food for children, but it is a healthful and nutritious food, because it contains that which the growing bodies of children demand and must have if they are to be helped in physical development and health preservation.

Besides being filtered to take out the organic matter found in all city water, the water used in making WARD'S BREAD contains, in small and proper quantities, Arkady Yeast Food (U. S. Registered Trade-Mark, issued May 9th, 1916), a preparation approved and protected by United States patents.



Arkady Yeast Food is a wonderful aid to the making of good bread for the following reason: City water varies in different localities. In some places it is hard—in others soft—according to the amount of mineral salt, and this condition makes a vast difference in bread.

Arkady Yeast Food is a compound of mineral salts, chiefly lime salts, such as are commonly found in natural waters. Because of this mineral content, Arkady Yeast Food modifies natural waters to the best standard for bread-making. It also reduces the amount of yeast required by more than half, thus reducing the fermentation period, conserving a greater proportion of the food value of the wheat and producing a more nutritious and healthful loaf than can be made under any other known method. Eminent scientists, pure food authorities and physicians declare that the lime salts, of which Arkady Yeast Food is chiefly composed, are most necessary to the human system and of great value in the building of bone, teeth, muscle and tissue.

Your children—all children—will thrive and grow strong and sturdy if fed on WARD'S BREAD. It will satisfy their hunger, please their palates and give their little bodies a helping hand to rugged manhood and womanhood.

Buy a loaf of WARD'S BREAD today. Try it on its merits and form your own opinion of its true worth and excellence.

WIFE WILL SEE ACCUSED BANK MAN IN JAIL

[illegible] E. Nickerson of Stoneham [illegible] of the Stoneham [illegible] assistant cashier [illegible] Harry A. Jones [illegible] on a charge of embezzling $41,000 of the bank's funds [illegible], but the directors [illegible] agreed that the case should be pushed to the limit.

Mrs. Jones planned today to go to [illegible] Cambridge jail to see her husband, whom she has not seen since [illegible] Tuesday afternoon.

WIFE OVERWHELMED.

Overwhelmed by the blow which has fallen upon her home, Mrs. Jones could say nothing about the case.

[illegible] Mrs. Mary Jones, who [illegible] with her son and daughter [illegible] sent a message of love and confidence to the [illegible] at the jail [illegible] said:

[illegible] Harry [illegible] believe ever that [illegible]. But no matter what he may have done [illegible] still my boy and I love him just the same.

"I never knew what Harry was paid at the [illegible] but I always thought he was making more out of his insurance business or some other side lines. But I did not know about his business affairs."

DEPOSITORS SAFE.

Jones and Walter H. Wilcox of Woburn have been partners in an insurance business for the past two years under the name of Harry A. Jones & Co. The business was started by Jones' father, the late James A. Jones. Mr. Wilcox said today that he kept the books at his Woburn office while Jones handled the money and [illegible] them. The business had increased to [illegible] about $15,000 in premiums annually. Wilcox has been checking up the insurance books and accounts. He said today he had found everything straight so far in his examination.

Jones has three daughters, one in high school, the second in a grammar school and the third an infant of twenty months.

Neither of the two older girls was in school yesterday, a circumstance possibly significant of the household shrinking from observation.

Jones said at the time of the confession which he is alleged to have made to the directors Tuesday that he did not care what became of himself, but felt sorry for his family.

Doctor Nickerson said today:

"The directors of the bank met last night. We talked matters over and agreed that the case was such a serious one that it should be pushed to the limit.

"The board will be able to take care of any deficiency, so that the depositors will lose nothing."

United States Bank Examiner [illegible] is continuing his examination of the books. He may be able to give out a statement this evening. He will make his report direct to the federal authorities, after which the directors will be notified and their standing determined.

Jones is charged with embezzlement of $41,000. The bank's capital stock is $50,000. Jones was under $10,000 bonds. The last bank statement showed undivided profits of $[illegible] and a surplus fund of $[illegible]. That would make nearly $36,000 in cash available to offset the shortage so far revealed. The bank's securities are said to be intact. The deposits approximate $200,000.

GREATER SHORTAGE POSSIBLE.

Question was raised today whether the examiner's probe will reveal a greater shortage than $41,000, even as high as $50,000.

Not until all depositors' books have been turned in, balanced and compared with the card accounts in the bank, will it be possible to determine the exact extent of the loot.

As the investigation progressed it became more apparent that the manipulation of his accounts by Jones resembled in a remarkable degree the plan followed by George W. Coleman, just released from the [illegible] jail for having wrecked the National City Bank of Cambridge.

This similarity extended to the habits of the two men. Both were young men, their first stealing commenced at about the same time, both entertained lavishly for years uncovered, both owned expensive automobiles, and both were supposed to have outside resources to eke out the small salaries.

In the case of Coleman directors knew the bank was doing an increased business, yet for some reason accounts were falling off and the running was becoming hard. Not until a few days ago was there the least suspicion directed against Jones.

His immediate superior was Cashier Charles A. Bailey. Bailey considered Jones "the soul of honor." He said:

"We were told then that he was going about more than a good family man should. As a result we came to the bank immediately and examined the books and found that they had been tampered with.

"He received and handled all the deposits, and he alone worked on the books. Bank examiners came, and so did certified public accountants and went over them, but he had covered up.

FIND DEPOSIT BOOKS.

"Whenever deposits were made he credited the books of the depositors with the money passed over the counter to him and arranged the books so that they balanced up all right."

The bank examiners are now calling in all deposit books to compare them with the deposit ledgers. This will require a few days' work and then a statement will be made.

Doctor Nickerson said yesterday that of late the bank had been running hard, that the results were not what they should have been. Consequently, after the meeting Monday night an examination of the books was made. A hasty survey showed that all was not right.

The accounts had been juggled, a difference of almost $23,000 between the individual cards and the balance sheet appearing. Jones was consulted Tuesday morning and given an hour to explain. Finally, it is said, he admitted his wrong-doing.

New Woman Golfing Champion Among Select in Sport in England

Mrs. William J. Gavin, at the top of her swing

Mrs. William J. Gavin, representing Cherry Valley, New York, who won the championship of the Women's Eastern Golf Association at Manchester yesterday, is one of the best known figures in select sporting circles of Great Britain.

She came to this country a year ago and was runner up to Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck of Philadelphia in the last National championship.

Mrs. Gavin is an aviatrix of ability and holds the distinction of being the first woman to cross or attempt to cross the British Channel in an aeroplane. She is a big game hunter of ability and was in the Paul J. Rainey expedition into Africa.

She is in this country in the interests of the Allied Red Cross, and will shortly return to England. Her grandfather was the Earl of Harrowby and her great grandfather the Duke of Buccleuch.

BERLIN ADMITS 2 MORE SHIPS WERE SUNK

Berlin, June 8.—The loss of eleven warships in the battle with the British off Jutland is now admitted by the Admiralty. They are one battle cruiser, one ship of [illegible] construction, four small cruisers and five torpedo boats.

Sixty-two first-class ships were engaged on both sides, it is stated, not counting light cruisers, torpedo boats, destroyers and submarines.

The statement says:

"Of these losses the battleship Pommern was launched in 1905. The loss of the cruiser Wiesbaden, Elbing, Frauenlob and five torpedo boats has already been reported in official statements. For military reasons we refrained until now from making public the loss of the battle cruiser Lutzow and the cruiser Rostock."

The battle cruiser Lutzow, completed in 1915, was of 28,000 tons, [illegible] and had a principal armament of eight twelve-inch guns, as well as twelve six-inch guns. She was over 650 feet long.

The Rostock was a cruiser of the Karlsruhe class, displacing 4,900 tons and carrying 373 men. Her principal armament included twelve 4.1 guns. She was 456 feet long.

Denmark Reports Loss of Seidlitz

London, June 8.—The German battle cruiser Seidlitz sank off the coast of Denmark while being towed toward her base by destroyers and torpedo boats, according to a dispatch from Copenhagen to the Star today.

A previous dispatch had stated that the Seydlitz was seen after the Jutland battle fleeing southward along the Danish coast in a badly damaged condition and hotly pursued by British warships that were shelling her.

Chelsea Man Burned.

Attempting to extinguish a fire that started in the upholstery establishment at 195 Washington avenue, Chelsea, today, Michael J. Capel was badly burned about the arms and hands and was taken to the Frost Hospital.

Gala Day for Bedbugs in the Superior Court

John [illegible] Scully of No. [illegible] Hosmer street, Dorchester, [illegible] money by a Mattapan landlady, declared when the trial of the suit opened today in the Superior Court that there were bedbugs in the apartment he rented and that he was justified in moving without notice.

Mary A. Buckley of No. [illegible] Blue Hill avenue, who brought the suit for $[illegible] rent, was the first witness.

"I never saw there were bedbugs in the apartment [illegible] Mr. Scully [illegible] upstairs [illegible] and [illegible] me [illegible]," she said.

Mrs. Katherine M. Scully, wife of and chief witness for Scully, the defendant, said in describing alleged bedbug conditions:

"BEST ROOM WAS 'WALKING.'"

Mrs. Buckley, the landlady, testified:

"[illegible] by my son, after the Scully family moved out. I did not see any vermin. Mrs. Scully called me to the apartment three or four days after she moved in and showed me four bugs in the bathroom bowl. Later I saw some [illegible] and she picked them off. I never thought there were bugs there before they moved in.

"I hired an exterminator to clean the place. Mr. Scully ripped a moulding from the wall and sent for me. I saw bugs, but could not tell whether there were a hundred or more. Mrs. Scully told me that she saw bugs after the exterminator had been there and said that she was going to get out on account of the bugs."

TOOK THEM OFF WALL.

Eight witnesses were sworn for the defence. Mrs. Scully testified:

"I went to the B[illegible] house on April 17 and went through the apartment with Mrs. [illegible]. I noticed two closets [illegible] there. I never been any [illegible] there. She said No. I paid a deposit and we moved in Monday, May 3.

"I saw bugs Thursday night and showed them to Mrs. Buckley Friday morning. She said the furniture man must have brought them. We went into the front side room. In a closet she took four bugs off the wall and two off the wall near a window.

"Sunday Jack Buckley came up and killed some on the wall with a hammer. We notified them that we were going to move. Monday morning a man came and sprayed some of the rooms."

GRIFF WANTS CRAWFORD

Cleveland, June 8.—Clark Griffith, who is marooned here with the Washington team announces he is in high hopes of securing Sam Crawford by purchase from the Tygers. Griffith wants a clean-up hitter like "Wahoo Sam" and cares not, he says, if the veteran has lost the use of his throwing arm.

Sweden Wants Soccerits Sends Expenses for Team

Pawtucket, R. I., June 8.—John A. Fernley, president of the Ited States Soccer Football Association, received a check for $2,000 todayrom C. L. Kormerup, first vice-president of the Internationale Federation de oot ball at Stockholm, Sweden, with request that the United States se an all-America soccer team in July to play a series of five games in Sden and Norway against a Scandinavian team.

Mr. Komerup writes that $2,000 is on deposit in a Stockholm bank, making a $4,000 guarantee to cover the traveling expenses of the visitors.

The $4,000 is figured on a basis of $250 per man for sixteen men. This would provide for five extra men, in addition to the eleven which constitute a soccer team.

Only players of strict amateur standing will be eligible for the trip. Soccer authorities here say that the Swedish offer can be accepted for traveling expenses without impairing the amateur standing of the American players.

The international committee of the United States Football Association will meet at the Narragansett Hotel in Providence next Sunday, June 1[illegible] to act on the Swedish invitation. If it is accepted a team and extra men will be picked without delay, as it will be necessary for the men to sail on June 20.

There is a war factor in connection with the selection of an All-American team for this trip. It will be necessary, it is said, to have none but American citizens on it, lest the travelers encounter interference if any of the players are citizens of countries now at war.

The Bethlehems of Bethlehem, Pa., hold the championship, defeating the Rovers of Fall River three weeks ago in the 1916 finals. There are several English and Scottish players on the Bethlehem team who, under the neutrality ruling, would be ineligible for the Swedish trip.

CHI FANS SURPRISED BY CUB RELEASES

Chicago, June 8.—The announcement of President Weeghman of the Chicago Cubs that he had released both Doolan and Yerkes caused a sensation in baseball circles today. Both men, according to Weeghman, will go to Atlanta of the Southern League. Doolan and Yerkes had iron-clad contracts for large salaries, both players having been taken by the Cubs from the Federal League. These contracts will be fulfilled, it is said, the Atlanta club paying an amount in accord with the Southern League scale of salary, the balance being made up by Weeghman.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 8.—The [illegible] day was bad enough, but with [illegible] came official word from Ithaca that Charles E. Courtney would retire at [illegible] at the end of the present rowing season.

The retirement of the "Old Man" [illegible] not unexpected for in the last decade there have been reports [illegible] of [illegible] succession and last year when he fractured his skull on regatta day and lay under a [illegible] care for many months, undergraduates and alumni enthusiasts of Cornell were resigned to the idea of choosing another rowing mentor.

Against advice, the "Old Man" has appeared at quarters over in [illegible] and this week, but [illegible] everyone when ashore or in the coaching launch [illegible] has been guarded and watched by a professional nurse.

ELLER'S RECORD NT ACCEPTED BY A. AU.

New York, June 8.—Negligence on the part of the officials who managed the American Liberty [illegible] Sport [illegible] carnival which was held at Sheepshead Bay Speedway last Sunday will deprive Jack J. Eller of the Irish-American A. C. of the new world's record which he created in winning the 220 yard low hurdles.

The distance was measured [illegible] and after the race by a tape measure, but the A. A. U. does not accept records unless the distance is surveyed with a steel measure.

Can Yale Crew Repeat?

Big Surprise Expected

By TOM THORPE.

Will Old Eli triumph over Johnny Harvard when the crews meet at New London, Ct., on June 23? Will the Bulldog oarsmen repeat their victories of the past two seasons and lead Coach Bob Herrick's rowing pupils across the finish line? These are questions that all followers of rowing are asking.

Despite the fact that Guy Nickalls' delegation of oarsmen will paddle to the starting line with the prestige of two consecutive victories over their Cambridge rivals, they will not be accorded the distinction of ruling favorite in the New London classic. They will be a very bad second choice, with only the outsiders' chance of winning.

To date the New Haven oarsmen have been the great disappointment of the athletic year. Cornell, Pennsylvania and Columbia have all suffered defeats, but none has been so badly outclassed as Captain Seth Low and his crewmates.

Unless some wonderful change takes place before the big classic they will be one of the worst-beaten squads of oarsmen who have ever travelled to New London for a lacing.

FOUND ENRAGED BULLDOG.

The fact that all New Haven realizes the hopelessness of the Blue Navy may prove to be its salvation. Whenever the Bulldog is pushed to the wall by overwhelming rivals he always puts up the best fight. History has repeated itself on occasions too frequent to mention.

Last Fall when speedy Rush's Princeton footballers invaded New Haven to wipe up the gridiron with Tom Shevlin's Bulldog eleven they found a far different situation confronting them than they bargained for.

The Bulldog had turned on them and dragged them in the dust of defeat. So it may be with the annual classic of New London on June 23.

Driven to desperation by defeat upon defeat Captain Seth Low and his Yale crew-mates may buckle up and repeat the performance of Tom Shevlin's football squad of 1915.

On this desperate stand by the Yale oarsmen, all of New Haven are counting. Whether they will be equal to the occasion the race itself can only tell. They will be backed up by the weight of former final hour triumphs.

The style of stroke taught each of these crews is entirely different. Coach Guy Nickalls, former British champion, has installed an English system of rowing at Yale.

The Eli oarsmen are taught to row the same style of stroke employed by Cambridge and Oxford. They go to the ends of their slides and reach well out of the boat for the catch of their strokes.

The blades are pulled through the water at a very rapid rate of speed and the finish of the stroke is made with the body stretched out in an almost reclining position. No incline is given the slides.

The abdomen and leg muscles are called upon to withstand all of the strain of bringing the body back to an upright position and of running the seats along the slides to obtain the proper position for the following stroke.

To the lay mind this may not read as being a proposition that calls for any extra effort on the part of an oarsman, but it nevertheless does.

The American stroke calls for the oarsman to finish in an almost upright position and this with the incline to the slides allows him to crawl up with the minimum amount of effort to a proper position to get his catch for the following stroke.

ALWAYS MAXIMUM EFFORT.

The English stroke calls for him to work with maximum effort at all times. When it is taken into consideration that in a four-mile race oarsmen generally take from 700 to 750 strokes it is a very important factor. How many well trained athletes can throw themselves flat on a floor and raise to a sitting position 700 or 800 times in twenty minutes? Too few without some assistance.

For that reason there are many who believe that the English system of rowing is too antiquated to be taught in any institution of learning.

True it is that Nickalls' stroke proved supreme at New London in 1914 and 1915. But on those occasions it was not the quality of stroke that was in question, but the stoutness of heart of the individual oarsmen. Yale had been tow-lined so often that her sons were driven frantic.

They triumphed, too, because of dissension in the Harvard rowing camp. Coach Wray had his order very often modified by one of the Cambridge rowing committee and therefore his men did not do his coaching full justice.

SIMILAR TO CORNELL'S.

The Harvard system of rowing is quite similar to the one in vogue at Cornell under Charles Courtney. The men are allowed to go out to a full reach for their catch, which they obtain by putting all of their weight and strength on the handles of their sweeps. They whip the blades through the water, not digging them too deep, but keeping them submerged.

The finish is made by the oarsmen dropping the hands, turning the wrist and thrusting them forward. After this they again reach forward for the catch by gently easing forward on their slides.

The stroke is always finished with the body a little off the perpendicular and not in a reclining position as in the English stroke.

All of the crews of the American rowing world have discontinued the English style for the American one. Yale and Pennsylvania were the only two who used it last year. Coach Joe Wright, newly appointed Pennsylvania instructor, has restored the American stroke at the Quaker college.

An analysis of the Yale eight discloses the fact that Nickalls has abundance of rowing material to work with.

Seven of last year's championship eight are at college. Captain Seth Low is one of the best varsity sweepmen ever developed, as he has proven to be in every race that he has been called upon to row.

Circus Hands a K. O. Wallop to King Baseball

BOLES TO RETURN IN FALL

Harvard Football Star Plans Re-entering University—Enwright Will Also Be Back.

"Billy" Boles, one of the crack halfbacks on the 1915 Harvard football eleven, who, with Captain-elect Joe Gilman and Tom Enwright withdrew from college in February because of scholastic difficulties, is to re-enter Harvard in the Fall.

Boles will not be eligible for athletics, it is understood, until he has spent a full year at Cambridge, but after that can be a candidate for any sport team he wishes for two consecutive years.

The former Latin School star was one of the fastest members of Harvard's crashing backfield. Great things were expected from him in baseball, his friends predicting he would become the star of Fred Mitchell's staff of flingers.

When Boles' dismissal became known it occasioned great concern at Harvard, and with three or four crucial baseball games on hand his presence at Cambridge for the next ten days would certainly lift a heavy burden from the minds of both Coach Mitchell and Captain Nash.

Enwright, who withdrew with Boles, [illegible] the Harvard engineering camp at Squam Lake, N. H., this Summer which will make him eligible to take up his studies again at Cambridge in September.

TEN CREWS ROW IN RAIN ON HUDSON

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 8.—With the arrival of the Syracuse crews and the Cornell freshmen, the twelve eights of Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Syracuse are now on the Hudson in training for the Intercollegiate regatta on June 17.

All the crews, with the exception of the Pennsylvania varsity and eights, were on the river in the rain last night, ending the day's trials. The two Pennsylvania crews remained at quarters after their hard row over the course but the freshmen were given a long row by Coach Wright.

The Columbia crews took to the upper course above Krum Elbow tonight, where Coach Rice gave them nine miles of hard work. The Cornell and Syracuse crews went down the river and returned, covering about eight miles.

Chicago-New York Auto Record Cut to 31 Hours Flat

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 8.—All automobile records between Chicago and New York were smashed by a Chalmers "6-30" roadster, which covered 1,047 miles in thirty-one hours.

This clipped four hours forty-five minutes off the Packard record of thirty-five hours forty-five minutes, made by E. C. Patterson several years ago.

The car, which left Chicago at 3 a. m. Tuesday, was driven by B. F. Durham and Al Walden, who acted as relief driver from Cleveland here, and carried full equipment, including fenders.

The run was continuous, no stops being made except for gasoline, oil and water supplies. Durham drove from Chicago to Cleveland in eleven hours, four minutes for the 371 miles. Walden was at the wheel from Cleveland to Elmira, leaving at 3:55 p. m. and arriving at 1:08 a. m.

Durham arrived at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, New York city, at exactly 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The total distance shown on the speedometer from Chicago was 1,047 miles, the average being 33 7-10 miles per hour.

HarvardGraduate Seeks Career in "Pro" Ring

T[illegible]man Douglass Wheeler of Brooklyn, a graduate of Harvard, has adopted the profession of boxer as the [illegible] in which he expects to carve a successful career.

Wheeler has already had one or two settos in the squared circle and is preparing to meet better and more advertised fellow lightweights that stand in his path towards the pinnacle of boxing success.

Wheeler graduated from Harvard last June. During his four years' stay at Cambridge he developed under the training of Professor Henry Allen, who conducts a boxing school in Little's Block, from a novice into a boxer of great promise. He meets Eddie Barron, another lightweight, at Allentown, Pa., and has just telegraphed Allen to come on to his training quarters and prepare him for the bout.

Allen, who taught Oran Kirkpatrick about all the big Harvard heavyweight champion knows about the gloves, declares that Wheeler is a great two handed little fighter and he is [illegible] to Harvard. He will leave [illegible] Saturday for Allentown to take on his duties in the Wheeler training camp.

The Horseshoe Luck Theory

An Ancestral Tendency Based on Coincidence

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"A friend and I made it our business to visit many stores, shops and street stands to see whether the keepers of these places had any old horseshoes about. We found no place that was minus them. All had from one to half a dozen hung up, or nailed, in very conspicuous places. What magic-wonder is there in those old, rusty, bent-up, clumsy, dirty iron shoes that some poor old horse lost, and why do people with present-day education decorate their places with them?" C. H. F. L.

You should remember our lineage. We come from a very old race that once lived in trees, and, perhaps, had prehensile tails. These remnants of superstition in the mind resemble vestigial organs in the body. As man has a rudimentary tail [illegible] reasons about some [illegible] monkey.

[illegible] charms, omens and [illegible] upon the principle [illegible] This is the first [illegible] of phenomena that [illegible] causes and fee[illegible] We are accustomed [illegible] ignorance is the mother [illegible] but the statement [illegible] ignorance is the nurse [illegible] its mother is coin[illegible]

[illegible] things happen to fall out together hasty, untrained minds jump to the conclusion that they are [illegible] connected, and if, as [illegible] within the law of probabilities, several successive coincidences happen with [illegible] the first impression is deepened into a fixed belief.

MIND PRONE TO ACCEPT COINCIDENCE AS A PRINCIPLE

Curiously enough, when once a remarkable coincidence has been noticed, the mind is prone to accept it as a principle, becomes attached to it, prejudiced in its favor, and almost unconsciously disregards any subsequent occurrences that contradict it, while exaggerating the importance of those that seem to confirm it.

This is the ground of the belief in astrology, and similar delusions. If the man who first picked up a horseshoe in the road and had a wonderful stroke of good luck immediately after, had had correspondingly bad luck instead, the superstition based upon those bits of curved iron would have been reversed in character, and people instead of nailing them up as fetishes of fortune would avoid them as omens of calamity.

The fact that reliance upon coincidence is characteristic of dawning and undeveloped intelligence is illustrated by what all have observed in the education of lower animals, and even of human children. Make the first coincidence strong enough and its influence is never forgotten. "The burnt child dreads the fire"—yes, and the mere appearance of fire, also. Here occurs the birth of science, whose method is to experiment with coincidences until it learns whether they are true [illegible] simply fortuitous happenings.

And often [illegible] determine [illegible] gambler [illegible] loaded [illegible] "blanks" [illegible] cession that the most careful inquirer is occasionally misled or deceived, [illegible] discovered a law, when in fact it was only "a slant of luck" or chance.

The progress of [illegible] witnessed the [illegible] a few errors of that kind. In truth, if we take a broad view, we must admit that some of our most cherished scientific "laws" may be based upon a chain of [illegible] that seems interminable [illegible] the extremely [illegible] observation.

It is right that we should cry out against superstition, but in our hearts we know that we are all more or less [illegible] We [illegible] of [illegible] amulet [illegible] symbol [illegible] beads [illegible] seen [illegible] grow [illegible] piece [illegible] hole [illegible] comfort [illegible] extinguished [illegible] that the course of his life would be changed [illegible] not remove the look of fear from his countenance.

COMMON SENSE GREATER FOE OF SUPERSTITION THAN SCIENCE

He [illegible] carried [illegible] through all the days of [illegible] fortune, and secretly, yet almost unconsciously, he had all that time been linking up the specious chain of coincidence. Not many years ago I read of a very rich and successful man who said to an interviewer that he ascribed all his good fortune to a single act which he had done at the beginning of his career. He did not tell what the act was, but it was nothing in the way of [illegible] It was [illegible] carried a charm. After he had performed it "everything came his way." Many of these things can be [illegible] can do is to give common sense a hail, or a fact, now and then.

Girls Who Followed Advice Thank Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Too many of us have a [illegible] other people [illegible]

A year ago a girl wrote me a letter asking my advice in a love affair [illegible] heartily and sincerely—and conventionally, if you like. For all such girls there is just one answer, DON'T.

Recently I had a very pathetic letter from the girl, telling me how she grieved because she [illegible] adding [illegible] of the tragedy [illegible] her own weakness.

And now I am quoting another letter—one which comes from a girl who asked advice in all sincerity, took it, found it practical and was gracious enough to acknowledge that she had learned something from someone else.

The girl who is wise enough to profit by the viewpoint of someone more experienced than herself is likely to manage her life very efficiently. I thank my "Three Sincere Friends" for the letter I am quoting and I commend their sane intelligence to other girls. The letter follows.

"Some time ago I wrote you a letter and signed it 'Doubtful [illegible]' You will probably remember having answered it with an article on girls [illegible]

"Allow me to extend to you the most heartfelt thanks of A. B and myself for the kindly interest you have shown us in our quandary and we do assure you of our deep appreciation of your most welcome advice. We have all three benefited [illegible] directions implicitly and has come through with colors flying. No one of the party mentioned seemed annoyed when she refused and said she did not like the taste of liquor [illegible] one followed her [illegible] with urgings to drink. She has vowed never to touch another drop, and I am positive she is going to [illegible] to that avowal, as are both [illegible] myself.

Playing the Part

But, though the leap worked all right in rehearsal, on the night of the actual performance it went wrong. There was neither mattress nor tub there.

When poor Littledale jumped he fell [illegible] feet and landed on an oaken floor with a crash loud enough to wake the dead, and there was no splashing water to drown the crash [illegible]

The audience, expecting to hear a splash [illegible] instead the [illegible] bones upon the oak, set up a titter. But the heroic Littledale, equal to the occasion, silenced them.

(Helps to Beauty)

Science has aided in simplifying the banishing of hairy growth from the face, and according to a beauty specialist, the most effective treatment yet devised consists of applying a delatone paste to the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. When this paste is removed and the skin washed every trace of hair has vanished. Be sure to get real delatone.—Advertisement.

FRIARS' FROLIC PROVES BEST SEEN HERE

By FRED J. McISAAC.

The most entertaining show ever given by The Friars, and one of the brightest and cleverest arrangements of a conglomeration of talent that was ever sent out on a money hunt.

That was the verdict of the two big audiences which witnessed "The Friars' Frolic" at the Boston Opera House yesterday. The total receipts were reported to be over $9,000, which is the Boston record for an entertainment of this kind.

George M. Cohan, Abbot of The Friars, wrote the general outline of the show, most of the songs, and supplied a large part of the cast. The remainder was provided by the actors themselves and the group of composers, dramatists and [illegible] who co-operate.

The evening began with an old fashioned minstrel show, burnt cork, bones and tambos. The minstrels were divided into three sections to enable all the talent to get an opening. The first set of interlocutors were Julius Tannen and Max Figman; bones, Sam King and James Doyle; tambos, [illegible] and Harland Dixon.

The second shift were Jim Corbett, Irving Berlin, Andrew Mack, Frank Tinney, Hap Ward and Neil O'Brien. The third shift consisted of Jerry Cohan, William Collier, Jr., George Primrose, George Cohan and William Collier, Sr.

With all due regard to the other talent, Frank Tinney and Jim Corbett walked off with this portion of the entertainment, and Tinney collared a lot more than his share of the laughs during the remainder of the evening.

There was to have been a new minstrel sketch, with music, entitled, "The Bold, Brave Black and Tan," by George Cohan, which dealt with Villa, but it either didn't deliver on the road, or the troupe were too tired by the time they got to Boston, for it did not appear.

However, there was so much clever stuff upon the program that the show didn't close until after 11, and nobody worried much about the omission.

A big feature was the appearance of Bert Levy, Bud Fisher, and Rube Goldberg in a cartoon drawing competition, and equally popular was the Pianophiends number, in which seven pianos were played by seven popular composers: Berlin, Jean Swartz, Bert Grant, George Botsford, George Meyers, James Munroe and Ernest Ball. During this number a lot of trade secrets were exposed.

George Cohan and Willie Collier appeared in front of a [illegible] drop showing the Cohan and Collier Theatres. Collier spoke frankly about his moving picture experience, and Cohan mentioned a few private facts about himself. They then abused each other to the audience's heart's content. Then they finished up with a song entitled, "Here We Are, Together Again."

Albert Spaulding, the violinist, lent a little seriousness to the evening by playing a Chopin-Sarasate nocturne, and a very brilliant little air of his own composition entitled "Alabama."

What the audience most enjoyed was the frank and cruel manner in which the distinguished performers dealt with one anothers' idiosyncrasies, and this particular form of comedy was unquestionably the work of George Cohan.

The laughter, from first to last, was loud and prolonged. No doubt, at all, that everybody enjoyed themselves.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks were not as strong in New York at noon as they had been earlier, but many still showed gains. During the second hour there was profit taking. It affected the coppers as a class, while Norfolk & Western, Reading, Louisville & Nashville, Lee Tire, U. S. Smelting, American Smelting and several other issues were affected. Rails had [illegible] irregular. Distress was as conventional as it has been previously this week.

Gains at 12 o'clock included [illegible] Foundry ¼, American Locomotive ¼, Crucible ⅞, Distillers ⅝, Maxwell ¼, Studebaker ¾, Industrial Alcohol ¼, Marine preferred ⅝, United Fruit ¾, Railway Steel Spring 1⅛, American Can ¼, U. S. Steel ⅛, Illinois Central ½, Canadian Pacific ¾, Southern Pacific ¼, Chesapeake & Ohio 1, N. Y. Central ⅝, New Haven ¼, and St. Paul ¼.

Among declines were Norfolk & Western 1⅝, Louisville & Nashville ¾, Reading ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio ⅜, Union Pacific ⅛, American Smelting ⅜, U. S. Smelting ½, Lee Tire 1⅝, Baldwin ¼, Studebaker ⅝, Willys-Overland ½, Inspiration ⅛, Chino ⅝, Kennecott ⅞, Utah Copper ⅛ and Anaconda ⅞.

Gains in Boston included St. Mary ⅛, Copper Range ½, Mohawk ⅝, Old Dominion 1, United Fruit 3 and Butte & Superior 1½.

Among declines were Calumet & Arizona ¼, United Shoe ½ and Gulf common 1¼.

Railway issues were in great demand in New York at the opening and prominent for gains throughout early trading. Chesapeake & Ohio and Reading were then the strongest and most active. A number of specialties got attention for the same reason, including United Fruit and U. S. Smelting. The latter sold at a record high price. Louisville & Nashville was at its highest since the exchange reopened after being so long closed by the war. Coppers and munitions were comparatively quiet. Some observers thought increased demand for standard stocks indicated that Wall Street expects Chicago convention to [illegible]. In trading circles the situation there was viewed with great doubt. But it inspired supreme interest. First sales in Reading totalled [illegible] shares.

The Boston market began more active than usual of late, but with trading confined almost wholly to Atlantic Gulf and West Indies issues and to U. S. Smelting and United Fruit. Gulf common opened at a record high, but soon receded. U. S. Smelting also made a record high, while United Fruit was sold at its highest for this year to date.

Shamrock Mining Company shares have been listed upon the Boston Curb. The company owns forty-two lode claims, comprising 442 acres, in the Plomosa district in Yuma county, Arizona. Ores shipped from the property assayed 4.81 per cent. copper and 21.2 ounces in silver per ton on the low grade, and 18.52 per cent. to 22.42 per cent. copper and 126 ounces to [illegible] ounces silver per ton on assorted ores, plus gold values of $2 per ton.

Copper metal is [illegible], and quotations are described as nominal. In London spot declined 10s. and futures £1, while electrolytic was unchanged. Tin quotations were £1 higher. Spot lead and futures advanced 2s. 6d. Spot spelter was up 15s; futures were unchanged.

Friend and Foe Will Honor Kitchener

THE startling news of Lord Kitchener's death gives birth to one thought, which we do most earnestly hope is not a thought fathered only by a devout wish.

That thought is that the death of England's chief captain may be the forerunner of better feeling and of final peace between those two great peoples who inhabit England and Germany.

Let us explain what might at first blush seem an idle and even indecorous forecast.

It is our hope, as it is also our belief, that the German press and the German people will pay full tribute to the dead commander of their foemen's mighty armies.

The English and the German peoples have a common racial origin and have many characteristics in common. Among these are—as minor matters—a lack of the tact and politeness inherent in the Latin peoples, and—as major matters—a stubborn resolution and a manly courage and a love of country which highly become them.

In their heart of hearts the braver and better sort of Englishmen and Germans respect and admire each other's courage and fortitude and stamina. They are, in brief, foemen worthy of each other's steel.

Now, we can easily conceive that a noble tribute of respect and admiration paid by warriors of the German type to the dead man, who was a noble exemplar of all that is greatest and finest in warriors of the English type, might well move the heart of England to kindlier feeling toward Germany and the heart of Germany to kindlier feeling toward England. And so these two foemen, like knights who have met full knightly in the clash of arms, may full as knightly clasp hands above the warrior dead.

If this prove but a fancy we shall not be ashamed to have had the fancy and to have put it in words. For the dear God knows that our heart is sick of all this misery and woe and waste of life.

We can think just now of nothing finer than the soldierly act of the German airman who dropped from the heights of the air his tribute of flowers on the funeral of the French aviator he had slain in battle, with the simple farewell message, "To brave Pegoud."

There spoke the heart of a gallant gentleman to the soul of a gallant foeman, and we doubt not that many another French heart answered back gratefully and courageously.

The brave are always generous. It is only the mean of spirit that stoop to epithet and abuse and hateful words.

We expect that tried and approved warriors like these German soldiers will have nothing but respect and noble words to utter above England's dead commander.

And we expect that tried and approved warriors like these English soldiers will welcome their foemen's tribute to the great dead.

And so, please God, we may yet see Kitchener conquering in death the foe he so wisely and valiantly strove to conquer in life.

For the dead commander himself we feel that respect which his great deeds and his undoubted valor and patriotism demand of all right-minded men.

He was one of the four great military commanders whom England has produced, and if he does not rank with those geniuses of war, Cromwell and Marlborough, he at least stands on the level of Wellington, and so history will finally place him, we believe.

He was a soldier, approved by victory. He was an administrator and an organizer, and to that our own eyes are witness. And he was a gallant gentleman and a most loyal servant of his country and his King.

We could wish that it had been granted him to die, as he doubtless would have wished to die, on some hard-fought field of battle, amid the tumult and the shouting and the thunder of the guns. But we can at least be sure that he went down to his death in the choking grip of the sea bravely and soldierly, as became his fame, his lineage and that race of sailors and warriors from which he sprang and among whose great deeds his own will surely not be the least renowned.

Once-Overs

If you deliberately plan to sell to another man something which you know is not worth the price you ask, and you depend on his lack of knowledge concerning it to make it possible for you to carry out the deal, you are a thief.

Oh, it sounds a little harsh, does it?

Anyone making that statement to you—you would call him a liar?

If your conscience does not bother you after you have made a deal in which you know that you have wrongfully convinced a man that something you sold to him represents what he paid for it, you have a mean, dishonest streak in you.

You are taking from that man something to which you are not entitled.

That is what the man does who enters your house at night and robs you.

That he gives you nothing in return and has not asked your permission before he takes it is not an argument on which you may refute the statement that you are a thief.

Every bit that you have taken in excess of the worth of the article you sell makes you a dishonest man.

SON of Mars and Neptune's prey,
England sits in sackcloth gray
And her Ship of Hope today
Rides without a keel.
England sits disconsolate
Staring at the loom of Fate.

WELL you strove and well you played
War's unholy game
With its robes of red brocade
With its pomp and its parade
And its soul of shame.
Whether you were right or wrong,
You were clean and you were strong.

YOU were strong and you were clean,
Fit to live and die,
True to king and true to queen,
True to self, and now, serene,
'Neath the waves you lie.
Staring at the loom of Fate
England sits disconsolate.

Character

By J. P. Greene

President William Jewell College

IS it grown, or engraved, or forged? All these.

We are born without character, but it soon sprouts, and then grows rapidly. The soil is the home, the school, the social life, the business world—different kinds of soil, each contributing its elements to the growth of character.

Parents, teachers, companions and business associates are the character-cultivators, and largely determine the quality of the product. But, after all, each one grows his own character.

The word "character" is Greek, and means "engraved"—an ancient and beautiful conception. We—it may be with the help of others—engrave our own characters when we begin to act on our own judgments, when we choose and do, and thus form habits. A habit is a groove, or a line cut in the soul, fixed, along which future action is almost sure to run. Many habits make an engraving, a permanent picture of the soul, character.

It may be truly said, also, that character is forged. The human soul is a piece of metal, without form and without beauty. Or probably it has been engraved without knowledge, and is inartistic, ugly. It must be worked over. In order to make it right it must go into the hot fire and under the big hammer. If properly forged it will come out with a permanent form of grace and beauty. False lines and deformities—bad habits of thought and action—must be hammered out. They cannot be brushed off.

What is "character"? It is I, what I am, not what I seem to be, not what others think me to be (this is "reputation"), nor what I desire to be, nor hope to be, but just what I am—what I have grown into, what has been engraved on my soul, the form of my soul-metal as it came from the forge.

Character is a stable thing. Desiring and doing form character. But when it is once formed, it determines thought and action. If you know the character of a man pretty well you can tell what he will do in certain circumstances. A man who loves money inordinately is very apt to steal if strongly tempted.

A majestic oak is beautiful on a calm day in June. But as it writhes and groans in the tempest, it is awe-inspiring. The unseen roots hold. Character is rooted in thought. As a man thinks, so is he.

Geological History of the Delaware Water Gap Presented in Attractive Form on Chart Issued by United States Survey—Detailed Picture of Remarkable Section

By Garrett P. Serviss

A COUPLE of years ago I referred in these columns to the excellence of the topographic maps issued by the U. S. Geological Survey, and distributed to the public at a nominal cost. They form detailed pictures of our country which, with a very slight and easily acquired training in their use, give to their possessors all the principal advantages of a bird's-eye view.

An ordinary map shows only directions; these maps show, in addition, the ups and downs, hills, valleys and slopes, and yet all these details are introduced without confusion, and the clearness of the maps is delightful. Every automobilist making a trip ought to have a series of the maps covering the territory that he proposes to traverse.

As you drive along you can see, by a glance at the chart, the nature of the land ahead of and around you, the steepness of the slopes, the length of the hills, the elevation of every point on your route, above sea-level as well as above the level of the nearest valley. It is from maps of this kind that the artillerists of battling Europe learn where to drop their shells beyond the rim of the horizon, and the strategists where to hide their batteries and to conceal the movement of their troops.

I have just been studying a new edition of the "Delaware Water Gap Sheet," issued last month, to which Dr. George Otis Smith, the director of the Geological Survey, has called my attention. Here a very picturesque region, approximately 240 square miles in area, is placed before the eye like a view from a balloon, but far more definite.

Clear and Authoritative History of Whole Strange Region Presented

A special interest attaches to this particular chart in the fact that, on the back of it, there is printed a clear and authoritative geological history of the region, running back millions of years, and answering, in a manner that would not be expected by the average reader, the question which springs to the lips of every person passing under the frowning cliffs of Mount Tammany, through the great gateway of the Delaware: "How and when was this mighty cleft in the mountain wall opened for the river?"

The beauty of the map is that it not only shows the country as it is today, but illustrates its wonderful geological history and enables the reader to follow that history, almost step by step. With the aid of the description on the back he can trace the features of the land that were sculptured in the Great Ice Age, and also some that were formed tens of millions, and even perhaps hundreds of millions of years, before the Ice Age, running back to the mysterious Cambrian, Silurian and Devonian periods.

Up and down the region has swayed, now under the sea and now above it. The material of the hard rock wall of the Kittatinny range, through which the Delaware passes, was created in the Silurian period, although at that time it was part of an almost level plain, submerged by the sea.

It did not become a wall until gigantic pressures in the earth's crust had crumpled, swelled, rolled and uplifted into the sunshine the solid sea-bottom, throwing it into stupendous, motionless waves of rock, nor until the action of atmosphere agencies and water, continued for millions of years, had worn down the softer surrounding stone, and left the stubborn "Shawangunk conglomerate," of which the Kittatinny range consists, standing as a lofty barricade between the lower lands on the north and the south.

Before the Shawangunk wall had begun to form, through the wearing away and lowering of its surroundings, the entire country lay nearly at the present level of the top of Mount Tammany, and a stream that was to become the present Delaware "probably passed through a gentle depression in a low ridge that must have existed where the hard Shawangunk conglomerate came to the surface, a low place determined by the weakening of the hard rocks by a sharp minor fold, so that erosion proceeded there more rapidly."

Tributaries Wore Down Surrounding Surface as Delaware Made Principal Attack

The land behind continued to rise during the Cretaceous period, increasing the slope toward the sea, and the streams tributary to the Delaware, as well as the Delaware itself, quickened their pace, and, with it, augmented their erosive action. The tributaries, with their contributing streams, brooks and rills, wore down the general surface, while the Delaware continued its attack on the gradually emerging wall, deepening its preliminary cut and forming cascades and rapids, where the stones, pebbles, sands and boulders swept along by its plunging current acted almost like a saw, which even the indurated conglomerate could not arrest.

Thus, through millions of years, while the wall rose higher, the gap was deepened, until it became the huge water gate that we admire and wonder at today.

It would be a valuable contribution to the pleasure and knowledge of the people if similar information were provided on the reverse of many others of the topographic charts covering regions of special geological interest, and, in fact, there is no region that has not some interest of that kind.
